Banish'd Cavaliers.

ACT I. SCENE I.

A Chamber.

Enter Florinda and Hellena.

Flor. HEAVN'S! What an impertinent Thing is a young Girl bred in a Nunnery! How full of Questions! Prithee no more Hellena; I have already told thee more than thou understand'st.

Hel. The more is my Misfortune; I am very desirous to know as much as you, which makes me so inquisitive; nor is't enough to know you're a Lover, unless you also tell me who it is you sigh for.

Flor. When you are a Lover, I shall think you fit for a Secret of that Nature; but not before.

Hel. I confess, indeed, I was never a Lover yet——but I begin to have a shread Guess, what 'tis to be so, and fancy it very pretty to sigh, and sing, and blush, and wish, and dream and wish, and long and wish to see the Man; and when I do, look pale and tremble; just as you did when my Brother brought Home the fine Engliſh Colonel to ſee you——what do you call him? Don Belwile.

Flor. Fie, Fie, Hellena!

Hel. Now that Bluſh betrays you——I am ſure 'tis ſo——or is it Don Antonio the Vice-Roy's Son?——Or perhaps the rich old Don Vincentio, whom my Father deſigns for your Huſband?——Why do you bluſh again?

Flor. I bluſh with Indignation; and how near ſoever my Father thinks I am to marrying that hated Object, I ſhall let him ſee I underſtand better what's due to my Beauty, Birth and Fortune, and more to my Soul, than to obey thoſe unjuſt and harſh Commands.

Hel. Now hang me, if I don't love thee for that dear Diſobedience. I love Miſchief ſtrangely, as moſt of our Sex do, who are come to love nothing elſe——But tell me, dear Florinda, don't you love that fine Angleſe?——for I vow next to loving him myſelf, 'twill pleaſe me moſt that you do ſo, for he is ſo gay and ſo handſome——and ſo——you know what.

Flor. Hellena, a Maid intended for a Nun, ought not to be ſo very curious in a Diſcourſe of Love.

Hel. And doſt thou think that I'll be a Nun? Or at leaſt till I'm ſold, I'm fit for nothing elſe. Faith no, Siſter; and that which makes me long to know whether you love Belwile, is, becauſe I hope he has ſome mad Companion or other, that will ſpoil my Devotion; nay I'm reſolv'd to provide myſelf this Carnival, if there be e'er a handſome Fellow of my Humour above Ground, tho I ſhould deviate from the common Rules and aſk firſt.

Flor. Prithee be not ſo wild.

Hel. What! Now you have provided yourſelf with a Man, you are under no manner of Concern for poor me——Prithee tell me, what doſt thou ſee about me that is unfit for Love——Am not I in the Prime of Youth? Have not I a Humour gay? A Beauty paſſable? A Vigour deſirable? Well ſhap'd? Clean limb'd? Sweet breath'd? And Senſe enough to know how all theſe ought to be employ'd to the beſt Advantage: Yes, I do and will. Therefore lay aſide your Hopes of my Fortune, by my being a Devotee, and tell me how you came acquainted with this Belwile; for I perceive you knew him before he came to Naples.

Flor. Yes, I knew him at the Siege of Pampelona, he was then a Colonel of French Horſe, who, when the Town was ranſack'd, nobly treated my Brother and myſelf, preſerving us from all Inſolencies; and I muſt own, (beſides great Obligations) I have I know not what, that pleads kindly for him about my Heart, and will ſuffer no other to enter——But ſee my Brother.

Enter Don Pedro, Stephano, with a Maſquing Habit, and Callis.

Pedro. Good morrow, Siſter. Pray when ſaw you your Lover, Don Vincentio?

Flor. I know not, Sir——Callis, when was he here? for I think of it ſo little, I know not when it was,

Pedro.

Pedro. I have a Command from my Father here to tell you, you ought not to despise him, a Man of so vast a Fortune, and such a Passion for you—Stephano methinks— [Puts on his Masquing Habit.

Flor. A Passion for me! 'Tis more than e'er I saw, or had a Desire should be known—I hate Vincentio, and I would not have a Man so dear to me as my Brother follow the ill Customs of our Country, and make a Slave of his Sister—And Sir, my Father's Will, I'am sure you may divert.

Pedro. I know not how dear I am to you, but I wish only to be rank'd in your Esteem, equal with the English Colonel Belwile—Why do you frown and blush? Is there any Guilt belongs to the Name of that Cavalier?

Flor. I'll not deny I value Belwile: When I was expos'd to such Dangers as the licens'd Lust of common Soldiers threatned, when Rage and Conquest flew thro' the City—then Belwile, this Criminal for my sake, threw himself into all Dangers to save my Honour, and will you not allow him my Esteem?

Pedro. Yes, pay him what you will in Honour—but you must consider Don Vincentio's Fortune, and the large Jointure he'll make you.

Flor. Let him consider my Youth, Beauty and Fortune; which ought not not to be thrown away on his Age and Jointure.

Pedro. 'Tis true, he's not so young and fine a Gentleman as that Belwile—but what Jewels will that Cavalier present you with? Those of his Eyes and Heart?

Hel. And are not those better than any Don Vincentio has brought from the Indies?

Pedro. Why how now! Has your Nunnery-breeding taught you to understand the Value of Hearts and Eyes?

Hel. Better than to believe Vincentio deserves Value from any Woman—He may perhaps increase her Bags, but his Age has rendered him incapable to increase her Family.

Pedro. This is fine—Go up to your Devotion, you are not design'd for the Conversation of Lovers.

Hel. Nor Saints yet a while, I hope. [Aside. Is't not enough that you make a Nun of me, but you must cast my Sister away too, exposing her to a worse Confinement than a religious Life?

Pedro. The Girl's mad—Is it a Confinement to be carry'd into the Country, to an antient Villa belonging to the Family of the Vincentio's these five hundred Years, and have no other Prospect than that pleasing one of seeing all her own that meets her Eyes—a fine Air, large Fields and Gardens, where she may walk and gather Flowers?

Hel. When? By Moon-Light? For I'm sure she dares not encounter with the Heat of the Sun; that were a Task only for Don Vincentio and his Indian Breeding, who loves it in the Dog-days—And if these be her daily Divertisements, what are those of the Night, to lie in a wide Moth-eaten Bed-Chamber with Furniture in Fashion in the Reign of King Sancho the First; the Bed that which his Forefathers liv'd and dy'd in.

Pedro. Very well.

Hel.

Hel. This Apartment (new furbish'd and fitted out for the young Wife) he (out of Freedom) makes his Dressing-room; and being a frugal and a jealous Coxcomb, instead of a Valet to uncase his feeble Carcase, he desires you to do that Office—Signs of Favour, I'll assure you, and such as you must not hope for, unless your Woman be out of the Way.

Pedro. Have you done yet?

Hel. That Honour being past, the Giant stretches itself, yawns and sighs a Belch or two as loud as a Musket, throws himself into Bed, and expects you in his foul Sheets, and ere you can get yourself undrest, he entertains you with a Snore or two, but nothing else—And are not these fine Blessings to a young Lady.

Pedro. Have you done now?

Hel. And this Man you must kiss, nay, you must kiss none but him too—and nuzzle thro' his Beard to find his Lips—and this you must submit to for Life, and all for a mere Jointure.

Pedro. For all your Character of Don Vincentio, she is as like to marry him as she was before.

Hel. Marry Don Vincentio! Hang me, such a Wedlock would be worse than Adultery with another Man: I had rather see her in the Hofiel de Dieu, to waste her Youth there in Vows, and be a Handmaid to Lazars and Cripples, than to lose it in such a Marriage.

Pedro. You have consider'd, Sister, that Belvile has no Fortune to bring her to, is banish'd his Country, despis'd at home, and pity'd abroad.

Hel. What then? The Vice-Roy's Son is better than that Old Sir Fifty. Don Vincentio! Don Indian! He thinks he's trading to Gambo still, and wou'd barter himself (that Bell and Bawble) for your Youth and Fortune.

Pedro. Callis, take her hence, and lock her up all this Carnival, and at Lent she shall begin her everlasting Penance in a Monastery.

Hel. I care not, I had rather be a Nun, than be oblig'd to marry as you wou'd have me, if I were design'd for't.

Pedro. Do not fear the Blessing of that Choice—you shall be a Nun.

Hel. Shall I so? You may chance to be mistaken in my Way of Devotion—A Nun! Yes, I am like to make a fine Nun! I have an excellent Humour for a Grate: No, I'll have a Saint of my own to pray to shortly, if I like any that dares venture on me. [Aside.]

Pedro. Callis, make it your Business to watch this wild Cat. As for you Flerinda, I've only try'd you all this while, and urg'd my Father's Will; but mine is, that you would love Antonio, he is brave and young, and all that can compleat the Happiness of a gallant Maid—This Absence of my Father will give us Opportunity to free you from Vincentio, by marrying here, which you must do To-morrow.

Flor. To-morrow!

Pedro. To-morrow, or 'twill be too late—'tis not my Friendship to Antonio, which makes me urge this, but Love to thee, and Hatred to Vincentio—therefore resolve upon't To-morrow.

Flor. Sir, I shall strive to do, as shall become your Sister.

Pedro. I'll both believe and trust you—Adieu.

[Exit Pedro and Stephano.]

Hel.

Hel. As becomes his Sister!—That is, to be as resolv'd your Way as he is—— [Hellena goes to Callis.]

Flor. I ne'er 'till now perceiv'd my Ruin near,
I've no Defence against Antonio's Love,
For he has all th' Advantages of Nature,
The moving Arguments of Youth and Fortune.

Hel. But hark you, Callis, you will not be so cruel to lock me up indeed; Will you?

Cal. I must obey the Commands I hate——besides, do you consider what a Life you are going to lead?

Hel. Yes, Callis, that of a Nun: And till then I'll be indebted a World of Prayers to you, if you let me now see, what I never did, the Divertisements of a Carnival.

Cal. What, go in Masquerade? 'Twill be a fine Farewell to the World I take it——pray what wou'd you do there?

Hel. That which all the World does, as I am told, be as mad as the rest, and take all innocent Freedom—Sister, you'll go too, will you not? come prithee be not sad——We'll out-wit twenty Brothers, if you'll be ruled by me—Come put off this dull Humour with your Clothes, and assume one as gay, and as fantastick as the Dress my Cousin Valeria and I have provided, and let's ramble.

Flor. Callis, Will you give us leave to go?

Cal. I have a youthful Itch of going myself. [Aside.]
——Madam, if I thought your Brother might not know it, and I might be suffered to wait on you, for by my troth I'll not trust young Girls alone.

Flor. Thou see'st my Brother's gone already, and thou shalt attend and watch us.

Enter Stephano.

Steph. Madam, the Habits are come, and your Cousin Valeria is dress'd, and stays for you.

Flor. Very well——I'll write a Note, and if I chance to see Belville, and want an Opportunity to speak to him, that shall let him know what I've resolv'd in favour of him.

Hel. Come let's in and dress us.

[Exeunt.]

SCENE II. A long Street.

Enter Belville melancholy, Blunt and Frederick.

Fred. Why, what the Devil ails the Colonel, in a Time when all the World is gay, to look like sable Lent thus? Hadst thou been long enough in Naples to have been in love, I should have sworn some such Judgment had befallen thee.

Belv. No, I have made no new Amours since I came from Naples.

Fred. Have you left none behind you in Paris?

Belv. Neither.

Fred. I can't divine the Cause then; unless the old Cause, the Want of Money.

Blunt.

Blunt. And another old Cause, the want of a Wench.
Wou'd not that revive you?

Belv. You're mistaken, Ned.

Blunt. Nay, then thou art past Cure.

Fred. I have found it out; thou hast renew'd thy Acquaintance with the Lady that cost thee so many Sighs at the Siege of Pampelona—Pox on't, what d'ye call her—her Brother's a noble Spaniard—Nephew to the dead General—Florinda—ay, Florinda—And will nothing serve thy turn but that damn'd virtuous Woman, whom on my Conscience thou lov'st in spite too, because thou see'st little or no Possibility of gaining her.

Belv. Thou art mistaken, I have Interest enough in that lovely Virgin's Heart, to make me proud and vain, were it not abated by the Severity of a Brother, who perceiving my Happiness—

Fred. Has civilly forbid thee the House?

Belv. 'Tis so, to make way for a powerful Rival, the Vice Roy's Son, who has the Advantage of me, in being a Man of Fortune, a Spaniard, and her Brother's Friend; which gives him Liberty to make his Court, whilst I have recourse only to Letters, and distant Looks from her Window which are as soft and kind as those which gracious Heav'n sends down on Penitents.

Blunt. Hey day! Simile! by this Light the Man is quite spoil'd—Frederick, what the Devil are we made of, that we cannot be thus concern'd for a Wench?—Our Cupids are like the Cooks of the Camp, they can roast or boil a Woman, but they have none of the fine Tricks to set them off, no Hogoes to make the Sauce pleasant, and the Stomach sharp.

Fred. I dare swear I have had a hundred as young, kind and handsome as this Florinda; and Devil take me, if they were not as troublesome to me i'th' Morning, as they were agreeable o'er Night.

Blunt. And yet, I warrant, he would not touch another Woman, if he might have her for nothing.

Belv. That's thy Joy, a cheap Whore.

Blunt. Why, truly. I love a frank Soul—When did you ever hear of an honest Woman that took a Man's Money? I warrant 'em good ones—But, Gentlemen you may be free, you have been kept so poor with Parliaments and Protectors, that the little Stock you have is not worth preserving—but I thank my Stars, I had more Grace than to forfeit my Estate by Cavaliering.

Belv. Methinks only following the Court should be sufficient to entitle them to that.

Blunt. They know I follow it to do it no good, unless they pick a Hole in my Coat for lending you Money now and then; which is a greater Crime to my Conscience, Gentlemen, than to the Commonwealth.

Enter Willmore.

Wil. Ha! dear Belvoile! noble Colonel!

Bel. Willmore! welcome ashore? my dear Rover!—what happy Wind blew us this good Fortune?

Wil.

Wil. Let me salute you my dear Fred. and then command me—
How is't honest Lad?

Fred. Faith, Sir, the old Compliment, infinitely the better to see my dear mad Willmore again—Prithee why cam'st thou ashore? and where's the Prince?

Wil. He's well, and reigns still Lord of the watery Element—I must aboard again within a Day or two, and my Business ashore was only to enjoy myself a little this Carnival.

Belv. Pray know our new Friend, Sir, he's but bashful, a raw Traveller, but honest, stout, and one of us. [Embraces Blunt.

Wil. That you esteem him, gives him an Interest here.

Blunt. Your Servant, Sir.

Wil. But well—Faith I'm glad to meet you again in a warm Climate, where the kind Sun has its God-like Power still over the Wine and Women—Love and Mirth are my Business in Naples; and if I mistake not the Place, here's an excellent Market for Chapmen of my Humour.

Belv. See here are those kind Merchants of Love you look for.

Enter several Men in masquing Habits, some playing on Musick, others dancing after; Women dress'd like Curtezans, with Papers pinn'd to their Breasts, and Baskets of Flowers in their Hands.

Blunt. Zounds! what have we here?

Fred. Now the Game begins.

Wil. Charming pretty Creatures faith! May a stranger have leave to look and love?—What's here—Roses for every Month! [Reads the Paper.

Blunt. Roses for every Month! What means that?

Belv. They are, or wou'd have you think they're Curtezans, who here in Naples are hired by the Month.

Wil. Kind and obliging to inform us—Pray where do these Roses grow? I would fain plant some of 'em in a Bed of mine.

Wom. Beware such Roses, Sir.

Wil. A Pox of a Fear: I'll be bak'd with thee between a pair of Sheets, and that's thy proper Still, so I might but strow such Roses over me and under me—Fair one I wish you wou'd give me leave to gather at your Bush this idle Month, I wou'd go near to make some Body smell of it all the Year after.

Belv. Indeed thou hast need of such Remedy, for thou stinkest of Tar and Rope-ends, like a Dock or Pesthouse.

[The Woman puts herself into the Hands of a Man, and Exit.

Wil. Nay, nay, you shall not leave me so.

Belv. By all Means use no Violence here.

Wil. Death! Just as I was going to be damnably in love, to have her led off! I could pluck that Rose out of his Hand, and even kiss the Bed, the Bush it grew in.

Fred. No Friend to Love like a long Voyage at Sea.

Blunt. Except a Nunnery, Fred.

Wil. Death! But will they not be kind, quickly be kind? Thou know'st I'm no tame Sigher, but a rampant Lion of the Forest.

Two Men dress all over with Horns of several sorts, making Grimaces at one another, with Papers pinned on their Backs, advance from the farther end of the Scene.

Belw. Oh the fantastical Rogues, how they are dress'd! 'Tis a Satir against the whole Sex.

Wil. Is this a Fruit that grows in this warm Country?

Belw. Yes; 'Tis pretty to see these Italians start, swell, and stab at the Word Cuckold, and yet stumble at Horns on every Threshold.

Wil. See what's on their Back—Flowers for every Night. [Reads.—Ah Rogue! And more sweet than Roses of ev'ry Month! This is a Gardiner of Adam's own breeding. [They dance.

Belw. What think you of those grave People?—is a Wake in Essex half so mad or extravagant?

Wil. I like their sober grave way, 'tis a kind of legal authoriz'd Fornication, where the Men are not chid for't, nor the Women despis'd, as amongst our dull English; even the Monseurs want that part of good Manners.

Belw. But here in Italy a Monseur is the humblest best bred Gentleman—Duels are so baffled by Bravo's, that an Age shews not one, but between a Frenchman and a Hangman, who is as much too hard for him on the Piazza, as they are for a Dutchman on the new Bridge—But see another Crew.

Enter Florinda, Hellena, and Valeria, dress'd like Gipsies, Callis and Stephano, Lucetta, Philippo and Sancho in Masquerade.

Hel. Sister, there's your Englishman, and with him a handsome proper Fellow—I'll to him, and instead of telling him his Fortune, try my own.

Wil. Gipsies, on my Life—Sure these will prattle if a Man cross their Hands. [Goes to Hellena]—Dear pretty (and I hope) young Devil, will you tell an amorous Stranger what Luck he's like to have?

Hel. Have a care how you venture with me, Sir, lest I pick your Pocket, which will more vex your English Humour, than an Italian Fortune will please you.

Wil. How the Devil cam'st thou to know my Country and Humour?

Hel. The first I guess by a certain forward Impudence, which does not displease me at this time; and the Loss of your Money will vex you, because I hope you have but very little to lose.

Wil. Egad Child, thou'rt i'th' right; it is so little, I dare not offer it thee for a Kindness—But cannot you divine that I have something also of more value about me, that I would more willingly part with?

Hel. Indeed no, that's the Business of a Witch, and I am but a Gipsy yet—Yet without looking in your Hand, I have a parlous Guess; 'tis some foolish Heart you mean, an inconstant English Heart, as little worth stealing as your Purse.

Wil. Nay, then thou dost deal with the Devil, that's certain—Thou hast guess'd as right as if thou hadst been one of that Number it has languisht for—I find you'll be better acquainted with it; nor can you take it in a better time, for I am come from Sea, Child; and

Venus

Venus not being propitious to me in her own Element, I have a world of Love in store——Prithee Child, take some on't off my Hands.

Hel. Why——I could be inclin'd that way——but for a foolish Vow I am going to make —— to die a Maid.

Wil. Then thou art damn'd without Redemption; and as I am a good Christian, I ought in charity to divert so wicked a Design——therefore prithee dear Creature, let me know quickly when and where I shall begin to set a helping hand to so good a Work.

Hel. If you should prevail with my tender Heart (as I begin to fear you will, for you have horrible loving Eyes) there will be difficulty in't that you'll hardly undergo for my sake.

Wil. Faith Child, I have been bred in Dangers, and wear a Sword that has been employ'd in a worse Cause, than for a handsome kind Woman——Name the Danger——let it be any thing but a long Siege, and I'll undertake it.

Hel. Can you Storm?

Wil. Oh, most furiously.

Hel. What think you of a Nunnery-wall? For he that wins me, must gain that first.

Wil. A Nun! Oh how I love thee for't! There's no Sinner like a young Saint——Nay, now there's no denying me: The old Law had no Curse (to a Woman) like dying a Maid; witness Jephtha's Daughter.

Hel. A very good Text this, if well handled; and I perceive, Father Captain, you would impose no severe Penance on her who was inclin'd to console her self before she took Orders.

Wil. If she be young and handsome.

Hel. Ay, there's the Thing——but if she be not.

Wil. By this Hand, Child, I have an implicit Faith, and dare venture on thee with all Faults——besides, 'tis more meritorious to leave the World when thou hast tasted and prov'd the Pleasure on't; then 'twill be a Virtue in thee, which now will be pure Ignorance.

Hel. I perceive, good Father Captain, you design only to make me fit for Heaven——but if on the contrary you should quite divert me from it, and bring me back to the World again, I should have a new Man to seek I find; and what a Grief that will be——for when I begin, I fancy, I shall love like any thing: I never try'd yet.

Wil. Egad, and that's kind——Prithee, dear Creature, give me Credit for a Heart, for faith I'm a very honest Fellow——Oh, I long to come first to the Banquet of Love; and such a swinging Appetite I bring——Oh, I'm impatient. Thy Lodging Sweet-heart, thy Lodging, I'm a dead Man!

Hel. Why must we Women be either guilty of Fornication or Murder, if we converse with you Men?——And is there no difference between leave to love me, and leave to lie with me?

Wil. Faith, Child, they were made to go together.

Lucet. Are you sure this is the Man?

Sancho. When did I mistake your Game?

Lucet.

Lucet. This is a stranger, I know by his gazing; if he be brisk he'll venture to follow me; and then, if I understand my Trade, he's mine: he's Engliſh too, and they ſay that's a ſort of good-natur'd loving People, and have generally ſo kind an Opinion of themſelves, that a Woman with any Wit may flatter 'em into any ſort of Fool ſhe pleaſes.

Blunt. 'Tis ſo——ſhe is taken—I have Beauties which my falſe Glaſs at home did not diſcover.

[She often paſſes by Blunt, and gazes on him; he ſtruts, and cocks, and walks, and gazes on her.]

Flor. This Woman watches me ſo, I ſhall get no Opportunity to diſcover my ſelf to him, and ſo miſs the intent of my coming——But as I was ſaying, Sir——by this Line you ſhould be a Lover.

[Looking in his Hand.]

Belw. I thought how right you gueſs'd, all Men are in love, or pretend to be ſo——Come, let me go, I'm weary of this fooling.

[Walks away.]

Flor. I will not, till you have confeſs'd whether the Paſſion that you have vow'd Florinda be true or falſe. [She holds him, he ſtrives to get from her.]

Belw. Florinda!

[Turns quick towards her.]

Flor. Softly.

Belw. Thou haſt nam'd one will fix me here for ever.

Flor. She'll be diſappointed then, who expects you this Night at the Garden gate, and if you'll fail not——as let me ſee the other Hand——you will go near to do——ſhe vows to die or make you happy.

[Looks on Callis, who obſerves 'em.]

Belw. What canſt thou mean?

Flor. That which I ſay——Farewel.

[Offers to go.]

Belw. Oh charming Sybil ſtay, complete that Joy, which, as it is, will turn into Diſtraction!——Where muſt I be? At the Garden-gate? I know it—at night, you ſay—I'll ſooner forfeit Heaven than diſobey.

Enter Don Pedro and other Maſquers and paſs over the Stage.

Cal. Madam, your Brother's here.

Flor. Take this to inſtruct you farther.

[Gives him a Letter, and goes off.]

Fred. Have a care, Sir, what you promiſe; this may be a Trap laid by her Brother to ruin you.

Belw. Do not diſturb my Happineſs with Doubts. [Opens the Letter.]

Wil. My dear pretty Creature, a Thouſand Bleſſings on thee; ſtill in this Habit, you ſay, and after Dinner at this Place.

Hel. Yes, if you will ſwear to keep your Heart, and not beſtow it between this time and that.

Wil. by all the little Gods of Lovè I ſwear, I'll leave it with you; and if you run away with it, thoſe Deities of Juſtice will revenge me.

[Ex. all the Women.]

Fred. Do you know the Hand?

Belw. 'Tis Florinda's.

All Bleſſings fall upon the virtuous Maid.

Fred. Nay, no Idolatry, a ſober Sacrifice I'll allow you.

Belw.

Belv. Oh Friends! The welcom'st News, the softest Letter!—Nay, you shall see it; and could you now be serious, I might be made the happiest Man the Sun e'er shone on.

Wil. The Reason of this mighty Joy?

Belv. See how kindly she invites me to deliver her from the threaten'd Violence of her Brother——will you not assist me?

Wil. I know not what thou mean'st, but I'll make one at any Mischief where a Woman's concern'd——but she'll be grateful to us for the Favour, will she not?

Belv. How mean you?

Wil. How should I mean? Thou know'st there's but one way for a Woman to oblige me.

Belv. Don't profane——the Maid is nicely virtuous.

Wil. Pshaw! pox, then she's fit for nothing but a Husband; e'en let her go, Colonel.

Fred. Peace, she's the Colonel's Mistress, Sir.

Wil. Let her be the Devil; if she be thy Mistress, I'll serve her——name the way.

Belv. Read here this Postscript.

[Gives him a Letter.

Wil. [Reads.] *At ten at night—at the Garden-Gate—of which, if I cannot get the Key, I will contrive a way over the Wall—come attended with a Friend or two——*Kind heart, if we three cannot weave a String to let her down a Garden-Wall, 'twere pity but the Hangman wove one for us all.

Fred. Let her alone for that: Your Woman's Wit, your fair kind Woman, will out-trick a Brother or a Jew, and contrive like a Jesuit in Chains—but see, Ned Blunt is stol'n out after the Lure of a Damsel.

Belv. So he'll scarce find his way home again, unless we get him cry'd by the bell-man in the Market place, and 'twou'd sound prettily——a lost English boy of thirty.

Fred. I hope 'tis some common crafty sinner, one that will fit him: it may be she'll sell him for Peru, the Rogue's sturdy and would work well in a Mine; at least I hope she'll dress him for our Mirth; cheat him of all, then have him well-favour'dly bang'd, and turn'd out naked at Midnight.

Wil. Prizhee what Humour is he of, that you wish'd him so well?

Belv. Why, of an English Elder brother's Humour, educated in a Nursery, with a Maid to tend him till Fifteen, and lies with his Grandmother till he's of Age; one that knows no Pleasure beyond riding to the next Fair, or going up to London with his right Worshipful Father in Parliament-time; wearing gay Clothes, or making honourable Love to his Lady Mother's Laundry-Maid; gets drunk at a Hunting-match, and ten to one gives some Proofs of his Prowess——A pox upon him, he's our banker, and has all our Cash about him, and if he fail we are all broke.

Fred. Oh let him alone for that matter, he's of a damn'd stingy Quality, that will secure our Stock; I know not in what Danger it were indeed, if the Jilt should pretend she's in love with him, for 'tis a kind believing Coxcomb; otherwise if he part with more than a Piece of Eight—geld him: for which offer he may chance to be beaten, if she be a Whore of the first Rank.

Belw. Nay the Rogue will not be easily beaten, he's stout enough; perhaps if they talk beyond his Capacity, he may chance to exercise his Courage upon some of them; else I'm sure they'll find it as difficult to beat as to please him.

Wil. 'Tis a lucky Devil to light upon so kind a Wench!

Fred. Thou hadst a great deal of Talk with thy little Gipsy, could'st thou do no good upon her? for mine was hard-hearted.

Wil. Hang her, she was certainly some damn'd honest Person of Quality, she was so very free and witty. If her Face be but answerable to her Wit and Humour, I wou'd be bound to Constancy this Month to gain her. In the mean time, have you made no kind Acquaintance since you came to Town?—you do not use to be honest so long, Gentlemen.

Fred. Faith Love has kept us honest, we have been all fir'd with a beauty newly come to Town, the famous Paduana Angelica Biana.

Wil. What, the Mistress of the dead Spanish General?

Belw. Yes, she's now only the ador'd beauty of all the Youth in Naples, who put on all their Charms to appear lovely in her sight, their Coaches, Liveries, and themselves, all gay, as on a Monarch's birthday, to attract the Eyes of this fair Charmer, while she has the Pleasure to behold all languish for her that see her.

Fred. 'Tis pretty to see with how much Love the Men regard her, and how much Envy the Women.

Wil. What Gallant has she?

Belw. None, she's expos'd to Sale, and four Days in the Week she's yours—for so much a Month.

Wil. The very Thought of it quenches all manner of Fire in me—yet prithee let's see her.

Belw. Let's first to Dinner, and after that we'll pass the Day as you please—but at Night ye must all be at my Devotion.

Wil. You may depend upon me.

[Exeunt.]

A C T

ACT II. SCENE I.

The Long Street.

Enter Belvile and Frederick in Masquing Habits, and Willmore in his own Clothes, with a Vizard in his Hand.

Wil. BUT prithee, why thus disguis'd and muzzl'd?

Belv. Because whatever Extravagances we commit in these Faces, our own may not be oblig'd to answer 'em.

Wil. I should have chang'd my external buff too; but no matter, my little Gipsy would not have found me out then: for if she shou'd change her's it is impossible I should know her, unless I should hear her prattle—A Pox on't, I cannot get her out of my Head: Pray Heaven, if ever I do see her again, she prove damnably ugly, that I may fortify myself against her Tongue.

Belv. Have a care of Love, for o' my conscience she was not of a Quality to give thee any Hopes.

Wil. Pox on 'em, why do they draw a Man in then? She has play'd with my Heart so, that 'twill never lie still, till I have met with some kind Wench that will go through the Game with me—Oh for my Arms full of soft, white, kind—Woman! such as I fancy Angelica.

Belv. This is her House, if you were but in stock to get Admittance; they have not din'd yet; I perceive the Picture is not out.

Enter Blunt.

Wil. I long to see the Shadow of the fair Substance, a Man may gaze on that for nothing.

Blunt. Colonel, thy Hand—and thine Fred. I have been an Ass, a deluded Fool, a very Coxcomb from my Birth 'till this Hour, and heartily repent my little Faith.

Belv. What the Devil's the Matter with thee Ned?

Blunt. O such a tempting Devil, Fred. such a Girl! So fond, so amorous, so toying and fine! and all for sheer Love, ye Rogue! Oh how she look'd and kiss'd! and sooth'd my Heart from my Bosom. I cannot think I was awake, and yet methinks I see and feel her Charms still.

Belv. Ha, ha, ha!

Wil. Death Man, where is she?

Blunt. What a Dog was I to stay in dull England so long—How have I laugh'd at the Colonel when he sigh'd for Love! but now the little Archer has reveng'd him, and by his own Dart, I can guess at all his his Joys, which then I took for Fancies, mere Dreams and Fables—

Well, I'm resolv'd to sell all in Essex, and plant here for ever.

Belv. What a Blessing 'tis, thou hast a Mistress thou dar'it boast of, for I know thy Humour is rather to have a proclaim'd Clap, than a secret Amour.

Wil. Dost thou know her Name?

Blunt. Her Name? No: What Care I for Names?—She's fair, young, brisk and kind, even to Ravishment: and what a Pox care I for knowing her by another Title.

Wil. Did you give her any thing?

Blunt. Give her!—Ha, ha, ha! why, she's a Person of Quality—That's a good one, give her! dost think such Creatures are to be bought? Or are we provided for such a Purchase? Give her indeed? Why she presented me with this Bracelet, for the Toy of a Diamond I us'd to wear: No, Gentlemen, Ned Blunt is not every Body—She expects me again to night.

Wil. Egad that's well; we'll all go.

Blunt. Not a Soul: No, Gentlemen, you are Wits; I am a dull Country Rogue, I.

Fred. Well, Sir, for all your Person of Quality, I shall be very glad to understand your Purse be secure; 'tis our whole Estate at present, which we are loath to hazard in one leaky Bottom: Come, Sir, unload.

Blunt. Take the necessary Trifle, useless now to me, that am belov'd by such a Gentlewoman—Money! Here take mine too.

Fred. No, keep that to be cozen'd, that we may laugh.

Wil. Cozen'd!—Death! wou'd I cou'd meet with one, that wou'd cozen me of all the Love I cou'd spare to night.

Fred. Pox 'tis some common Whore upon my Life.

Blunt. A Whore! yes with such Clothes! such Jewels! such a House! such Furniture, and so attended! a Whore tho'!

Belv. Why yes, Sir, they are such Whores.

Wil. Pox on't, where do these fine Whores live?

Belv. Where no Rogues in Office dare give 'em Laws, nor the Wine-inspir'd Bullies of the Town dare break their Windows; yet they are Whores, tho' this Essex Calf believes them Persons of Quality.

Blunt. Y'are all Fools, there are some Parts about this Essex Calf, that shall take with the Ladies, beyond all your Wit and Parts. This Shape and Size, Gentlemen, are not to be despis'd; my Waste tolerably long, with other inviting Signs, that shall be nameless.

Wil. Egad I believe he may have met with some Person of Quality that may be kind to him.

Belv. Dost thou perceive any such tempting Things about him, as shou'd make a fine Woman, and a Woman of Quality, pick him out from all Mankind, to throw away her Youth and Beauty upon, nay, and her dear Heart too?—No, no, Angelica has rais'd the Price too high.

Wil. May she languish for Mankind 'till she die, and be damn'd for that one Sin alone.

Enter two Bravoes, and hang up a great Picture of Angelica's against the balcony, and two little ones at each side of the Door.

Belv. See there the fair Sign to the Inn, where a Man may lodge that's Fool enough to give her Price. [Will. gazes on the Picture.]

Blunt. Zounds, Gentlemen, what's this?

Belv. A famous Curtezan that's to be sold.

Blunt. How! to be sold! nay, then I have nothing to say to her—fold! what Impudence is practis'd in this Country?—with Order and Decency Whoring's establish'd here by virtue of the Inquisition—Come let's be gone, I'm sure we're no Chapmen for this Commodity.

Fred. Thou art none, I'm sure, unless thou could'st have her in thy Bed at the Price of a Coach in the Street.

Wil. How wondrous fair she is—a Thousand Crowns a Month—by Heaven as many Kingdoms were too little. A plague of this Poverty—of which I ne'er complain, but when it hinders my Approach to Beauty, which Virtue ne'er could purchase. [Turns from the Picture.]

Blunt. What's this? [Reads] A Thousand Crowns a Month!

—Here's a Sum! sure 'tis a Mistake.

—Hark your Friend, does she give or take so much by the Month!

Fred. A Thousand Crowns! Why, 'tis a Portion for the Infanta.

Blunt. Hark ye Friends, won't she trust?

Brav. This is a Trade, Sir, that cannot live by Credit.

Enter Don Pedro in Masquerade, followed by Stephano.

Belv. See, here's more Company, let's walk off a-while.

[Pedro Reads.]

[Exeunt English.]

Enter Angelica and Moretta in the balcony, and draws a silk Curtain.

Ped. Fetch me a Thousand Crowns, I never wish'd to buy this beauty at an easier Rate. [Passes off.]

Ang. Prithee what said those Fellows to thee.

Brav. Madam, the first were Admirers of beauty only, but no Purchasers; they were merry with your Price and Picture, laugh'd at the Sum, and so past off.

Ang. No matter, I am not displeas'd with their rallying; their Wonder feeds my Vanity, and he that wishes to buy, gives me more Pride, than he that gives my Price can give me Pleasure.

Brav. Madam, the last I knew thro' all his Disguises to be Don Pedro, Nephew to the General, and who was with him in Pampelona.

Ang. Don Pedro! my old Gallant's Nephew! When his Uncle dy'd, he left him a vast Sum of Money; it is he who was so in love with me at Padua, and who us'd to make the General so jealous.

Moret. Is this he that us'd to prance before our Window, and take such care to shew himself an amorous Ass? if I am not mistaken, he is the likeliest Man to give your Price.

Ang. The Man is brave and generous, but of an Humour so uneasy and inconstant, that the Victory over his Heart is as soon lost as won; a Slave that can add little to the Triumph of the Conqueror: but Inconstancy's constancy's the Sin of all Mankind, therefore I'm resolv'd that nothing but Gold shall charm my Heart.

Moret. I'm glad on't; 'tis only Interest that Women of our Profession ought to consider: tho' I wonder what has kept you from that general Disease of our Sex so long, I mean that of being in love.

Ang. A kind, but fullen Star, under which I had the Happiness to be born; yet I have had no Time for Love; the bravest and noblest of Mankind have purchas'd my Favours at so dear a Rate, as if no Coin but Gold were current with our Trade—But here's Don Pedro again, fetch me my Lute—for 'tis for him or Don Antonio the Vice-Roy's Son, that I have spread my Nets.

Enter at one Door Don Pedro and Stephano; Don Antonio and Diego at the other Door, with People following in Masquerade, antickly attir'd, some with Musick: they both go up to the Picture.

Ant. A Thousand Crowns! had not the Painter flatter'd her, I should not think it dear.

Pedro. Flatter'd her! by Heaven he cannot. I have seen the Original, nor is there one Charm here more than adorns her Face and Eyes; all this soft and sweet, with a certain languishing Air, that no Artist can represent.

Ant. What I heard of her beauty before had fir'd my Soul, but this Confirmation of it, has blown it into a Flame.

Pag. Sir, I have known you throw away a thousand Crowns on a worse Face, and tho' y'are near your Marriage, you may venture a little Love here; I dare say Florinda—will not miss it.

Pedro. Ha! Florinda! Sure 'tis Antonio.

Ant. Florinda! name not those distant Joys, there's one Thought of her will check my Passion here.

Pedro. Florinda scorn'd! and all my Hopes defeated of the Possession of Angelica! [A Noise of a Lute above. Ant. gazes up.] Her Injuries by Heaven he shall not boast of.

S O N G.

WHEN Damon first began to love,
He languisht in a soft Desire,
And knew not how the Gods to move,
To lessen or increase his Fire.
For Celia in her charming Eyes
Wore all Love's Sweet, and all his Cruelties.

II.

But as beneath a Shade he lay,
Weaving of Flowers for Celia's Hair,
She chanc'd to lead her Flock that way,
And saw the am'rous Shepherd there.
She gaz'd around upon the Place,
And saw the Grove (resembling Night)
To all the Joys of Love invite,
Whilst guilty Smiles and blushes dress her Face,
At this the bashful Youth all Transport grew,
And with kind Force he taught the Virgin how
To yield what all his Sighs could never do.

Ant.

Ant. By Heav'n she's charming fair!

[Angelica throws open the Curtains, and bows to Antonio, who pulls off his Vizard and bows, and blows up Kisses. Pedro unseen looks in his face.

Pedro. 'Tis he, the false Antonio!

Ant. Friend, where must I pay my Offering of Love? [To the Bravo. My Thousand Crowns I mean.

Pedro. That Offering I have design'd to make, And yours will come too late.

Ant. Prithee be gone, I shall grow angry else, And then thou art not safe.

Pedro. My Anger may be fatal, Sir, as yours; And he that enters here may prove this Truth.

Ant. I know not who thou art, but I am sure thou art worth my killing, and aiming at Angelica. [They draw and fight.

Enter Willmore and Blunt, who draw and part 'em.

Blunt. 'Sblood, here's fine doings.

Wil. Tilting for the wench I'm sure—nay gad, if that wou'd win her, I have as good a sword as the best of ye—Put up—put up, and take another Time and Place, for this is design'd for Lovers only. [They all put up.

Pedro. We are prevented; dare you meet me to-morrow on the Mole? For I've a Title to a better Quarrel, That of Florinda, in whose credulous Heart Thou'st made an Int'rest, and destroy'd my Hopes.

Ant. Dare?

I'll meet thee there as early as the Day.

Pedro. We will come thus disguis'd, that whosoever chance to get the better, he may escape unknown.

Ant. It shall be so.

Who shou'd this Rival be? unless the English Colonel, of whom I've often heard Don Pedro speak; it must be he, and time he were removed, who lays a claim to all my Happiness.

Wil. This Posture's loose and negligent, The sight on't wou'd beget a warm desire In souls, whom impotence and age had chill'd.

————— This must along with me.

Brav. What means this Rudeness, Sir? ————— Restore the Picture.

Ant. Ha! Rudeness committed to the fair Angelica!

————— Restore the Picture, Sir.

Wil. Indeed I will not, Sir.

Ant. By Heav'n but you shall.

Wil. Nay, do not shew your sword: if you do, by this dear beauty— I will shew mine too.

Ant. What right can you pretend to't?

Wil. That of Possession, which I will maintain——you perhaps have 1000 Crowns to give for the Original.

Ant. No matter, Sir, you shall restore the Picture.

Ang. Oh Moretta! what's the matter? [Ang. and Moret. above.]

Ant. Or leave your Life behind.

Wil. Death! You lye — I will do neither.

Ang. Hold I command you, if for me you fight.

[They fight, the Spaniards join with Antonio, Blunt laying on like mad. They leave off and bow.]

Wil. How heavenly fair she is! — Ah Plague of her Price.

Ang. You Sir, in buff, you that appear like a soldier, that first began this Insolence.

Wil. 'Tis true, I did so, if you call it Insolence for a Man to preserve himself; I saw your charming Picture, and was wounded: Quite thro' my soul each pointed beauty ran; and wanting a Thousand Crowns to procure my Remedy, I laid this little Picture to my bosom — — which if you cannot allow me, I'll resign.

Ang. No, you may keep the Trifle.

Ant. You shall first ask me leave, and this. [Fight again as before.]

Enter Belvile and Frederick, who join with the English.

Ang. Hold; will you ruin me? Biskey, Sebastian, part them.

[The Spaniards are beaten off.]

Moret. Oh Madam, we're undone, a pox upon that rude Fellow, he's set on to ruin us: we shall never see good Days, till all the fighting poor Rogues are sent to the Gallies.

Enter Belvile, Blunt and Willmore, with their Shirts bloody.

Blunt. Beat me at this sport, and I'll neer wear sword more:

Belv. The Devil's in thee for a mad Fellow, thou art always one at an unlucky adventure. — — — Come let's be gone whilst we're safe, and remember these are Spaniards, a sort of people that know how to revenge an affront. [To Will.]

Fred. You bleed; I hope you are not wounded.

Wil. Not much: — — a plague upon your Dons, if they fight no better they'll ne'er recover Flanders. — — — What the Devil was't to them that I took down the picture?

Blunt. Took it! Faith we'll have the great one too; 'tis ours by Conquest. — — — Prithee help me up, and I'll pull it down. — — —

Ang. Stay Sir, and ere you affront me farther, let me know how you durst commit this Outrage — — — To you I speak Sir, for you appear like a Gentleman.

Wil. To me, Madam? — — Gentlemen, your Servant. [Belv. stays him.]

Belv. Is the Devil in thee? Do't know the danger of entering the House of an incens'd Curtezan?

Wil. I thank you for your Care — — — but there are other matters in hand, there are, tho' we have no great Temptation. — — — Death! Let me go.

Fred. Yes, to your Lodging, if you will, but not in here. — — —
Damn these gay Harlots — — — by this hand I'll have as sound and handsome a whore for a Patacoon. — — — Death Man, she'll murder thee.

Will.

Wil. Oh! Fear me not, shall I not venture where a beauty calls? A lovely charming beauty? For fear of Danger! When by Heaven there's none so great as to long for her, whilst I want Money to purchase her.

Fred. Therefore 'tis Loss of time, unless you had the thousand Crowns to pay.

Wil. It may be she may give a Favour for once, at least I shall have the pleasure of saluting her when I enter, and when I depart.

Belv. Pox, she'll as soon lie with me, as kiss thee, and sooner stab than do either——you shall not go.

Ang. Fear not, Sir, all I have to wound with, is my Eyes.

Blunt. Let him go, I believe the Gentlewoman means well.

Belv. Well, take thy Fortune, we'll expect you in the next street —— Farewell Fool, ——farewell. ——

Wil. B'ye Colonel. ——

Fred. The Rogue's stark mad for a wench.

[Exeunt.

Enter Willmore, Angelica, and Moretta.

Ang. Insolent Sir. how durst you pull down my Picture?

Wil. Rather, how durst you set it up, to tempt poor amorous Mortals with so much Excellence? Which I find you have but too well consulted by the unmerciful Price you set upon't.—Is all this Heaven of beauty shewn to move despair in those that cannot buy? And can you think the effects of that despair shou'd be less extravagant than I have shewn.

Ang. I sent for you to ask my pardon, Sir, not to aggravate your crime.——I thought I shou'd have seen you at my feet imploring it.

Wil. You are deceived, I came to rail at you, and talk such Truths too, as shall let you see the Vanity of that Pride, which taught you how to set such a price on sin. For such it is, whilst that which is love's due is meanly barter'd for.

Ang. Ha, ha, ha, alas good Captain, what pity 'tis edifying doctrine will do no good upon me——Moretta, fetch the gentleman a glass, and let him survey himself, to see what charms he has——and guess my business. [Aside in a soft Tone.

Moret. He knows himself of old, I believe those breeches and he have been acquainted ever since he was beaten at Worcester.

Ang. Nay, do not abuse the poor creature. ——

Moret. Good weather-beaten corporal, will you march off? we have no need of your Doctrine, tho' you have of our charity; but at present we have no scraps, we can afford no Kindness; in fine, Sirrah, the price is too high i'th' Month, therefore troop, I say.

Wil. Here, good Fore-woman of the shop, serve me, and I'll be gone.

Moret. Keep it to pay your Laundress, your Linnen stinks of the Gun-Room; for here's no selling by retail.

Wil. Thou hast sold plenty of thy stale ware at a cheap rate.

Moret. Ay, the more silly kind heart I, but this is an age wherein beauty is at higher rates. ——In fine, you know the price of this.

Wil. I grant you 'tis here set down a thousand crowns a Month—
Baud, take your black Lead and fum it up, that I may have a Pistoleworth of these vain gay things, and I'll trouble you no more.

Mores. Pox on him, he'll fret me to Death:—abominable Fellow, I tell thee, we only sell by the whole piece.

Wil. 'Tis very hard, the whole cargo or nothing—Faith, Madam, my stock will not reach it, I cannot be your chapman.—Yet I have countrymen in town, Merchants of Love, like me; I'll see if they'll put for a share, we cannot lose much by it, and what we have no Use for, we'll sell upon the Friday's Mart, at—Who gives more? I am studying,
Madam, how to purchase you, tho' at present I am unprovided of Money.

Ang. Sure this from any other Man wou'd anger me—nor shall he know the conquest he has made—Poor angry Man how I despise this railing.

Wil. Yes, I am poor,——but I'm a Gentleman,
And one that scorns this baseness which you practise.
Poor as I am, I would not sell myself,
No, not to gain your charming high-priz'd Person.
Tho' I admire you strangely for your beauty,
Yet I contemn your sordid Mind,

——And yet I wou'd at any Rate enjoy you;
At your own rate——but cannot——see here
The only sum I can command on earth;
I know not where to eat when this is gone:
Yet such a slave I am to love and beauty,
This last I'll sacrifice to you and love

——Nay, do not frown, I know you are to be bought,
And wou'd be bought by me
For a mean trifling sum, if I could pay it down,
Which happy Knowledge I'll again repeat,
And lay it to my Heart, it has a Virtue in't,
And soon will cure those wounds your eyes have made.
——And yet—there's something so divinely powerful there—
Nay, I will gaze——to let you see my strength.

By Heaven, bright Creature——I would not for the world thy Fame were half so fair as is thy Face. [Turns her away from him.

Ang. His words go thro' me to the very soul. [Aside
——If you have nothing else to say to me.

Wil. Yes, you shall hear how infamous you are——
For which I do not hate thee:
But that secures my Heart, and all the Flames it feels
Are but so many fierce unbridled Lusts,
I know it by their sudden bold Intrusion.
The Fire's impatient, and betrays, 'tis false——
For had it been the purer Flame of Love,
I should have pin'd and languish'd at your Feet,
Ere I had found assurance to discover it.
I now dare stand your Scorn, and your Denial.

Moret. Sure she's bewitcht, that she can stand thus tamely, and hear his saucy railing——Sirrah, will you be gone?

Ang. How dare you take this Liberty?——Withdraw. [To Moret. Pray tell me; Sir, are not you guilty of the same mercenary Crime? when a lady is propos'd to you for a wife, you never ask how fair, discreet, or virtuous she is; but what's her Fortune——which if but small, you cry——she will not do my business——and basely leave her, tho' she may languish for you.——Say, is not this as poor?

Wil. It is a barbarous custom, which I will scorn to defend in our sex, and do despise in yours.

Ang. Thou art a brave Fellow! put up thy Gold, and know, that were thy Fortune large, as is thy soul, thou shou'dst not buy my Love, cou'dst thou forget those mean Effects of Vanity, which set me out to sale; and as a Lover, prize my yielding Joys.

Canst thou believe they'll be entirely thine,
Without considering they were mercenary?

Wil. I cannot tell, I must bethink me first——ha, Death, I'm going to believe her. [Aside.

Ang. Prithee confirm that Faith——or if thou canst not——flatter me a little, 'twill please me a little from thy Mouth.

Wil. Curse on thy charming Tongue! Dost thou return my feign'd Contempt with so much subtilty? [Aside.

Thou'st found the easiest way into my Heart,
Tho' I yet know that all thou say'st is false. [Turning from her in a Rage.

Ang. By all that's good 'tis real,
I never lov'd before, tho' oft a Mistress.

——Shall my first Vows be slighted?

Wil. What can she mean?

Ang. I find you cannot credit me.

In an angry Tone.

Wil. I know you take me for an errant ass,
An ass that may be sooth'd into belief,
And then be us'd at pleasure.

——But, Madam, I have been so often cheated
By perjurd, soft, deluding Hypocrites,
That I've left no Faith for the cozening sex,
Especially for women of your trade.

Ang. The low-esteem you have of me, perhaps
May bring me back my Heart again:
For I have pride that yet surmounts my Love.

Wil. Throw off this pride this enemy to bliss,
And shew the power of Love: 'tis with those arms
I can be only vanquish'd, made a slave.

Ang. Is all my mighty Expectation vanish?

——No, I will not hear thee talk,——thou hast a Charm
In every word, that draws my Heart away.

And all the thousand Trophies I design'd,
Thou hast undone——why art thou soft?

Thy Looks are bravely rough, and meant for war.

Could thou not storm on still?

I then perhaps had been as free as thou.

Wil. Death! How she throws her Fire about my soul!

—Take heed, fair Creature, how you raise my Hopes,
Which once assum'd pretend to all Dominion.

There's not a Joy thou hast in store.

I shall not then command:

For which I'll pay thee back my soul, my Life.

Come, let's begin th' account this happy Minute.

Ang. And will you pay me then the price I ask.

Wil. Oh, why dost draw me from an awful worship,
By shewing thou art no divinity?

Conceal the fiend, and shew me all the angel;

Keep me but ignorant, and I'll be devout,

And pay my Vows for ever at this shrine. [Kneels, and kisses her hand.

Ang. The pay I mean is but thy Love for mine.

—Can you give that?

Wil. Intirely—come, let's withdraw: where I'll renew my vows,— and breathe 'em with such ardour, thou shalt not doubt my Zeal.

Ang. Thou hast a power too strong to be resisted. [Ex. Wil. and Ang.

Moret. Now my curse go with you—Is all our project fallen to this?
To love the only enemy to our trade? Nay, to love such a shameroon, a very beggar; nay, a pirate-beggar, whose business is to rifle and be gone, a no-purchase, no-pay Tatterdemalion, an English piccaroon; a rogue that fights for daily drink, and takes a pride in being loyally lousy—Oh,
I could curse now, if I durst—but this is the Fate of most whores.

*Trophies, which from believing fops we win,
Are spoils to those who cozen us again.*

A C T

ACT III. SCENE I.

A Street.

Enter Florinda, Valeria, Hellena, in Antick different Dreffes from what they were in before, Callis attending.

Flor. I Cannot conceive what should make my brother in such an ill Humour; I hope he has not found out our Ramble this Morning.

Hel. No, if he had, we should have heard on't at both Ears, and have been mew'd up this Afternoon; which I would not for the World should have happen'd—Hey ho! I'm sad as a Lover's Lute.

Val. Well, methinks we have learnt this Trade of Gipsies as readily as if we had been bred upon the Road to Loretto; and yet I did so fumble, when I told the Stranger his Fortune, that I was afraid I should have told my own and yours by mistake—But methinks Hellena has been very serious ever since.

Flor. I would give my Garters she were in love, to be reveng'd upon her, for abusing me—How is't Hellena?

Hel. Ah!—Would I had never seen my mad Monsieur—and yet for all your laughing I am not in love—and yet this small Acquaintance, o'my Conscience, will never out of my Head.

Val. Ha, ha, ha,—I laugh to think how thou art fitted with a Lover, a Fellow that, I warrant, loves and adores every new Face he sees.

Hel. Hum—he has not kept his Word with me here—and may be taken up—that Thought is not very pleasant to me—what the Duce should this be now that I feel?

Val. What is't like?

Hel. Nay, the Lord knows—but if I should be hanged, I cannot choose but be angry and afraid, when I think that mad Fellow should be in love with any body but me—What to think of my self I know not—Would I could meet with some true damn'd Gipsy, that I might know my Fortune.

Val. Know it! Why there's nothing so easy: Thou wilt love this wand'ring Inconstant till thou find'st thy self hanged about his Neck, and then be as mad to get free again.

Flor. Yes, Valeria; we shall see her bestride his baggage-horse, and follow him to the Campaign.

Hel.

Hel. So, so; now you are provided for, there's no care taken of poor me——But since you have set my Heart a wishing, I am resolv'd to know for what. I will not die of the Pip, indeed.

Flor. Art thou mad to talk so? Who will like thee well enough to have thee, that hears what a mad wench thou art?

Hel. Like me! I don't intend every Man that likes me shall have me, but he that I like: I shou'd have staid in the Nunnery still, if I had like my Lady Abbess as well as she lik'd me. No, I came thence, not (as my wife brother imagines) to take an eternal Farewel of the world, but to love and to be belov'd; and I will be belov'd, or I'll get one of your Men, so I will.

Val. Am I put into the Number of Lovers?

Hel. You! My Couz, I know thou art too good-natur'd to leave us in any Design: Thou won't venture a Cast, tho' thou comest off a Loser, especially with such a Gamester—I observ'd your Man, and your willing Ears incline that way; and if you are not a Lover, 'tis an Art soon learnt——that I find. [Sighs.]

Flor. I wonder how you learnt to love so easily, I had a thousand Charms to meet my Eyes and Ears, ere I cou'd yield; and 'twas the knowledge of Belvile's Merit, not the surprizing Person, took my Soul—Thou art too rash to give a Heart at first sight.

Hel. Hang your considering Lover; I ne'er thought beyond the fancy, that 'twas a very pretty, idle, silly kind of Pleasure to pass one's time with, to write little, soft, nonsensical billets, and with great difficulty and danger receive Answers; in which I shall have my beauty prais'd, my wit admir'd (tho' little or none) and have the Vanity and Power to know I am desirable; then I have the more Inclination that way, because I am to be a Nun, and so shall not be suspected 'to have any such earthly Thoughts about me——But when I walk thus——and sigh thus——they'll think my Mind's upon my Monastery, and cry, how happy 'tis she's so resolv'd!——But not a single word of Man.

Flor. What a mad Creature's this!

Hel. I'll warrant, if my brother hears either of you sigh, he cries (gravely) I fear you have the Indiscretion to be in love, but take heed of the Honour of our House, and your own unspotted Fame; and so he conjures on 'till he has laid the soft-wing'd God in your Hearts, or broke the bird's nest——But see here comes your Lover: but where's my inconstant? Let's step aside, and we may learn something. [Go aside.]

Enter Belvile, Fred. and Blunt.

Belv. What means this? The Picture's taken in.

Blunt. It may be the wench is good-natur'd, and will be kind gratis. Your Friend's a stout handsome Fellow.

Belv. I rather think she has cut his Throat and is fled: I am mad he should throw himself into Dangers——Pox on't, I shall want him to night——let's knock and ask for him.

Hel. My Heart goes a-pit-a-pat, for fear 'tis my Man they talk of.

Moret. What would you have?

Belv.

Belv. Tell the Stranger that enter'd here about two Hours ago, that his Friends stay here for him.

Moret. A Curse upon him for Moretta, would he were at the Devil—but he's coming to you. [Enter Willmore.

Hel. I, I, 'tis he. Oh how this vexes me.

Belv. And how, and how, dear Lad, has Fortune smil'd? Are we to break her windows, or raise up Altars to her? Hah!

Wil. Does not my fortune fit triumphant on my brow? dost not see the little wanton God there all gay and smiling? Have I not an Air about my face and eyes, that distinguish me from the Croud of common Lovers? By Heav'n, Cupid's Quiver has not half so many Darts as her eyes—Oh such a Bona Roba, to sleep in her Arms is lying in Fresco, all perfume'd Air about me, 'tis Paradise.

Hel. Here's fine encouragement for me to fool on. [Aside.

Wil. Hark ye, where didst thou purchase that rich Canary we drank to day? Tell me, that I may adore the Spigot, and sacrifice to the Butt: The Juice was divine, into which I must dip my Rosary, and then bless all things that I would have bold or fortunate.

Bel. Well, Sir, let's go take a bottle, and hear the Story of your Success.

Fred. Would not French wine do better?

Wil. Damn the hungry balderdash; cheerful Sack has a generous Virtue in't, inspiring a successful Confidence, gives Eloquence to the Tongue, and Vigour to the Soul; and has in a few Hours compleated all my Hopes and Wishes. There's nothing left to raise a new Desire in me—Come let's be gay and wanton—and Gentlemen, study, study what you want, for here are Friends,—that will supply, Gentlemen,—hark! What a charming sound they make—'tis he and she Gold whilst here, shall beget new Pleasures every moment.

Blunt. But hark ye, Sir, you are not married, are you?

Wil. All the Honey of Matrimony, but none of the Sting, Friend. I am not chain'd.

Blunt. Oh! thou'rt a fortunate Rogue.

Wil. I am so, Sir, let these inform you.—Ha, how sweetly they chime! Pox of Poverty, it makes a Man a Slave, makes wit and honour sneak, my Soul grew lean and rusty for want of Credit.

Blunt. Now this I like very well, it looks like my lucky Bargain! Oh how I long for the Approach of my 'Squire, that is to conduct me to her House again. Why! here's two provided for.

Fred. By this Light y're happy Men.

Blunt. Fortune is pleas'd to smile on us, Gentlemen,—to smile on us.

Enter Sancho, and pulls Blunt by the Sleeve. They go aside.

Sancho. Sir, my Lady expects you—she has remov'd all that might oppose your will and pleasure—and is impatient till you come.

Blunt. Sir, I'll attend you—Oh the happiest Rogue! I'll take no leave, lest they either dog me, or stay me. [Ex. with Sancho.

Belv. But then the little Gipsy is forgot?

Wil.

Wil. A Mischief on thee for putting her into my thoughts; I had quite forgot her else, and this Night's Debauch had quite drown'd her.

Hel. Had it so, good Captain?

[Claps him on the back.]

Wil. Ha! I hope she did not hear.

Hel. What afraid of such a Champion?

Wil. Oh! You're a fine Lady of your word, are you not? To make a Man languish a whole day——

Hel. In tedious search of me.

Wil. Egad, Child, thou'rt in the right; hadst thou seen what a melancholy Dog I have been ever since I was a Lover, how I have walkt the Streets like a Capuchin, with my Hands in my Sleeves——Faith, Sweatheart, thou wouldst pity me.

Hel. Now, if I should be hang'd, I can't be angry with him, he dissembles so heartily——Alas, good Captain, what pains you have taken——Now were I ungrateful not to reward so true a Servant.

Wil. Poor Soul! That's kindly said, I see thou bearest a Conscience——come then for a beginning shew me thy dear Face.

Hel. I'm afraid my small Acquaintance, you have been staying that swinging stomach you boasted of this morning; I remember then my little Collation would have gone down with you, without the Sauce of a handsome Face——Is your Stomach so queasy now?

Wil. Faith, long fasting, Child, spoils a Man's Appetite——yet if you durst treat, I could so lay about me still.

Hel. And would you fall to, before a Priest says Grace?

Wil. Oh fie, fie, what an old out-of-fashion'd thing hast thou nam'd? Thou could'st not dash me more out of Countenance, shouldst thou shew me an ugly Face.

Whilst he is seemingly courting Hellena, enter Angelica, Moretta, Biskey, and Sebastian, all in Masquerade: Ang. sees Will. and starts.

Ang. Heavens, is't he? And passionately fond to see another woman?

Moret. What cou'd you expect less from such a Swaggerer.

Ang. Expect! As much as I paid him, a Heart intire, which I had pride enough to think when e'er I gave, it would have rais'd the Man above the Vulgar, made him all Soul, and that all soft and constant.

Hel. You see, Captain, how willing I am to be Friends with you, till Time and Ill-luck make us Lovers; and ask you the Question first, rather than put your Modesty to the blush, by asking me: For alas, I know you Captains are such strict Men, severe Observers of your Vows to Chastity, that 'twill be hard to prevail with your tender Conscience to marry a young willing Maid.

Wil. Do not abuse me, for fear I should take thee at thy word, and marry thee indeed, which I'm sure will be Revenge sufficient.

Hel. O' my Conscience, that will be our Destiny, because we are both of one humour; I am as inconstant as you, for I have considered, Captain, that a handsome woman has a great deal to do whilst her Face is good, for then is our Harvest-time to reap Friends; and should I in these days of my Youth, catch a fit of foolish Constancy, I were totally undone; 'tis loitering by day-light in our great Journey: Therefore I declare, clare, I'll allow but one year for Love, one year for Indifference, and one year for Hate—and then—go hang your self—for I profess my self the gay, the kind, and the inconstant—the Devil's in't if this won't please you.

Wil. Oh most damnably!—I have a Heart with a hole quite thro' it too, no Prison like mine to keep a Mistress in.

Ang. Perjur'd Man! How I believe thee now! [Aside.]

Hel. Well, I see our business as well as Humours are alike, yours to cozen as many Maids as will trust you, and I as many Men as have Faith—See if I have not as desperate a lying look, as you can have for the heart of you. [Pulls off her Vizard; he starts.]

—How do you like it, Captain?

Wil. Like it! By Heav'n, I never saw so much beauty. Oh the Charms of those sprightly black Eyes, that beautiful fair face, full of Smiles and Dimples! Those soft round melting cherry Lips! And small eyes white Teeth! Not to be express'd, but silently adored! Oh one Look more, and strike me dumb, or I shall repeat nothing else till I am mad.

[He seems to court her to pull off her Vizard: She refuses.]

Ang. I can endure no more—nor is it fit to interrupt him; for if I do, my Jealousy has so destroy'd my Reason—I shall undo him—Therefore I'll retire. And you Sebastian [To one of her Bravoes] follow that woman, and learn who 'tis; while you tell the Fugitive, I would speak to him instantly. [To the other Bravo. Exit.]

[This while Flor. is talking to Belvile, who stands sullenly, Fred. courting Valeria.]

Val. Prithee, dear Stranger, be not so sullen; for tho' you have lost your Love, you see my friend frankly offers you hers, to play with in the mean time.

Belv. Faith, Madam, I am sorry I can't play at her Game.

Fred. Pray leave your Intercession, and mind your own Affair, they'll better agree apart; he's a modest figher in Company, but alone no woman escapes him.

Flor. Sure he does but rally—yet if it should be true—I'll tempt him farther—Believe me, noble stranger, I'm no common Mistress—and for a little proof on't—wear this Jewel—nay, take it, Sir, 'tis right, and bills of Exchange may sometimes miscarry.

Belv. Madam, why am I chose out of all Mankind to be the Object of your bounty.

Val. There's another very civil Question askt.

Fred. Devil take his Modesty, it spoils his own market, and hinders mine.

Flor. Sir, From my window I have often seen you; and women of Quality have so few opportunittes for Love, that we ought to lose none.

Fred. Ay, this is something! Here's a woman!—When shall I be blest with so much kindness from your fair Mouth!—Take the Jewel, fool. [Aside to Belv.]

Belv. You tempt me strangely, Madam, every way.

Flor. So, if I find him false, my whole Repose is gone. [Aside.]

Belv. And but for a Vow I've made to a very fine Lady, this Goodness had subdu'd me.

Fred. Pox on't be kind, in pity to me be kind, for I am to thrive here but as you treat her friend.

Hel. Tell me what did you in yonder house, and I'll unmasque.

Wil. Yonder house—oh—I went—to—a—to—why there's a friend of mine lives there.

Hel. What a she, or a he friend?

Wil. A man upon my honour! A Man—A she friend! No, no, Madam, you have done my business, I thank you.

Hel. And was't your Man friend, that had more darts in's eyes than Cupid carries in's whole budget of Arrows?

Wil. So!—

Hel. Ah such a Bona Roba: To be in her Arms is lying in Fresco, all perfumed air about me—Was this your man friend too?

Wil. So!—

Hel. That gave you the He and the She—Gold, that begets young Pleasures.

Wil. Well, well, Madam, then you see there are ladies in the world, that will not be cruel—there are, Madam, there are—

Hel. And there be men to as fine, wild, inconstant fellows as your self, there are, Captain, there are, if you go to that now—therefore I'm resolv'd—

Wil. Oh!

Hel. To see your face no more—

Wil. Oh!

Hel. Till to morrow

Wil. Egad you frighted me.

Hel. Nor then neither, unless you'll swear never to see that lady more.

Wil. See her!—why! never to think of womankind again?

Hel. Kneel, and swear. [Kneel, she gives him her hand.]

Wil. I do, never to think—to see—to love—nor lie with any but thy self.

Hel. Kifs the book.

Wil. Oh, most religiously. [Kisses her hand.]

Hel. Now what a wicked creature am I, to damn a proper fellow.

Cal. Madam, I'll stay no longer, 'tis e'en dark. [To Flor.]

Flor. However, Sir, I'll leave this with you—that when I'm gone, you may repent the opportunity you have lost by your modesty, [Gives him the Jewel, which is her Picture, and Ex. he gazes after her.]

Wil. 'Twill be an age till to morrow,—and till then I will most impatiently expect you—Adieu, my dear pretty angel. [Ex. all the women.]

Belv. Hah! Florinda's picture! 'twas she her self—what a dull dog was I? I would have given the world for one minute's discourse with her—

Fred. This comes of your modesty,—ah pox on your vow, 'twas ten to one but we had lost the Jewel by't.

Belv. Willmore! the blessed'st opportunity lost!—Florinda, friends, Florinda!

Wil. Ah rogue! such black eyes, such a face, such a mouth, such teeth,—and so much wit;—

Belv. All, all, and a thousand charms besides.

Wil. Why dost thou know her?

Belv. Know her! ay, ay, and a pox take me with all my heart for being modest.

Wil. But bark ye, friend, are you my rival; and have I been only beating the bush all this while?

Belv. I understand thee not—I'm mad—see here— [Shews the Picture.

Wil. Ha! whose picture is this?—'tis a fine wench.

Fred. The Colonel's mistress, Sir,

Wil. Oh, oh, here's——I thought it had been another prize—— come, come, a bottle will set thee right again. [Gives the Picture back.

Belv. I am content to try, and by that 'twill be late enough for our design.

Wil. Agreed.

*Love does all day the Soul's great Empire keep,
But wine at night lull's the soft God asleep.*

Enter Blunt and Lucetta with a Light.

Lucet. Now we are safe and free, no fears of the coming home of my old jealous husband, which made me a little thoughtful when you came in first——but now love is all the business of my soul.

Blunt. I am transported——Pox on't, that I had but some fine things to say to her, such as lovers use——I was a fool not to learn of Fred. a little by heart before I came——something I must say.— [Aside. Sweet soul, I am not us'd to compliment, but I'm an honest gentleman, and thy humble Servant.

Luc. I have nothing to pay for so great a favour, but such a love as cannot but be great, since at first sight of that sweet face and shape it made me your absolute Captive.

Blunt. Kind heart, how prettily she talks! Egad I'll shew her husband a Spanish trick; send him out of the world and marry her: she's damnably in-love with me, and will ne'er mind Settlements, and so there's that sav'd. [Aside.

Luc. Well, Sir, I'll go and undress me, and be with you instantly.

Blunt. Make haste then, for 'dsheartlikins, dear soul thou canst not guess at the pain of a longing lover, when his Joys are drawn within the compass of a few minutes.

Luc. You speak my sense, and I'll make haste to provide it. [Aside.

Blunt. 'Tis a rare girl, and this one night's enjoyment with her will be worth all the days I ever past in Essex——I wish she would go with me into England, tho' to say truth, there's plenty of whores there already.——But a pox on 'em they are such mercenary prodigal whores, that they want such a one as this, that's free and generous, to give 'em good examples:—Why, what a house she has! how rich and fine!

Sancho. Sir, my Lady has sent me to conduct you to her Chamber.

*Ex. Sancho,
Blunt.*

Blunt. Sir, I shall be proud to follow—Here's one of her servants too: dsheartlikins, by his garb and gravity he might be a justice of peace in Essex, and he is but a pimp here. [Exit.

The Scene changes to a chamber with an alcove-bed in it, a table, &c.
Lucetta in bed. Enter Sancho and Blunt, who takes the candle of Sancho at the door.

Sancho. Sir, my commission reaches no farther.

Blunt. Sir, I'll excuse your compliment:—what, in bed my sweet mistress?

Luc. You see, I still out-do you in kindness.

Blunt. And thou shalt see what haste I'll make to quit scores—oh the luckiest rogue! [Undresses himself.

Luc. Shou'd you be false or cruel now!

Blunt. False, 'sheartlikins, what dost thou take me for a Jew? an insensible heathen.—A pox of thy old jealous husband; and he were dead, egad, sweet soul, it should be none of my fault, if I did not marry thee.

Luc. It never shou'd be mine,

Blunt. Good soul, I'm the most fortunate dog!

Luc. Are you not undrest yet?

Blunt. As much as my impatience will permit.

Luc. Hold, Sir, put out the light, it may betray us else.

Blunt. Any thing, I need no other light, but that of thine eyes!—'sheartlikins, there I think I had it. [Aside.

[Puts out the candle, the bed descends, he gropes about to find it.—Why—why—where am I got? what not yet?—where are you sweetest? ah, the rogue's silent now—a pretty love-trick this—how how she'll laugh at me anon!—you need not, my dear rogue! you need not! I'm all on a fire already—come, come, now call me in for pity—Sure I'm enchanted! I have been round the chamber, and can find neither woman, nor bed—I lock'd the door, I'm sure she cannot go that way; or if she cou'd, the bed cou'd not—enough, enough, my pretty wanton, do not carry the jest too far,——Ha, betray'd! dogs! rogues! imps! help! help!

Enter Lucetta, Philippo, and Sancho with a Light.

Phil. Ha, ha, ha, he's dispatcht finely.

Luc. Now, Sir, had I been coy, we had mist of this booty.

Phil. Nay when I saw 'twas a substantial fool, I was mollified; but when you doat upon a serenading coxcomb, upon a face, fine cloaths, and a lute, it makes me rage.

Luc. You know I never was guilty of that folly, my dear Philippo, but with yourself—but come let's see what have we got by this.

Phil. A rich coat!—sword and hat!—these breeches too—are well lin'd!—see here, a gold watch!—a purse—ha! gold!—at least two hundred pistoles! a bunch of diamond rings; and one with the family arms!—
 a gold

a gold box!—with a medal of his king! and his lady's mother's picture!—these were sacred reliques, believe me!—old Queen Bess's. We have a quarrel to her ever since eighty eight, and may therefore justify the theft, the inquisition might have committed it.

Luc. See, a bracelet of bow'd gold, these his sister ty'd about his arm at parting—but well—for all this, I fear his being a stranger may make a noise, and hinder our trade with them hereafter.

Phil. That's our security; he is not only a stranger to us, but to the country too—the common shore into which he is descended, thou knowest, conducts him into another street, which this light will hinder him from ever finding again—he knows neither your name, nor the street where your house is, nay, nor the way to his own lodgings.

Luc. And art not thou an unmerciful rogue, not to afford him one night for all this?—I should not have been such a Jew.

Phil. Blame me not, Lucetta, to keep as much of thee as I can to myself—come, that thought makes me wanton,—let's to bed—Sancho, lock up these?

*This is the fleece which fools do bear,
Design'd for witty men to spare.*

[Exeunt.]

The Scene changes, and discovers Blunt, creeping out of a common shore, his face, &c. all dirty.

Blunt. Oh Lord!

[Climbing up.]

I am got out at last, and (which is a miracle) without a clue—and now to damning and cursing,—but if that would ease me, where shall I begin? with my fortune, myself, or the Queen that cozen'd me—what a dog was I to believe in women! Oh coxcomb—ignorant conceited coxcomb! to fancy she cou'd be enamour'd with my person, at the first sight enamour'd—Oh, I'm a cursed puppy, 'tis plain, fool was writ upon my forehead, she perceiv'd it,—saw the Essex calf there—for what allurements could there be in this countenance? which I can endure, because I'm acquainted with it—Oh, dull silly dog! to be thus sooth'd into a cozening! Had I been drunk, I might fondly have credited the young quean!—but as I was in my right wits, to be thus cheated, confirms I am a dull believing English country fop.—But my comrades! Death and the Devil, there's the worst of all—then a ballad will be sung To-morrow on the Prado, to a lousy tune of the enchanted squire, and the annihilated damsel—but Fred. that rogue, and the colonel, will abuse me beyond all christian patience—had she left me my clothes, I have a bill of exchange at home wou'd have sav'd my credit—but now all hope is taken from me—well, I'll home (if I can find the way) with this consolation, that I am not the first kind believing coxcomb; but there are, gallants, many such good natures amongst ye.

*And tho' you've better arts to hide your follies,
Adshheartlikins ye're all as errant cullies.*

SCENE, The Garden in the Night.

Enter Florinda undress'd with a Key, and a little Box.

Flor. Well, thus far I'm in my way to happiness; I have got myself free from Callis; my brother too, I find by yonder light, is got into his cabinet, and thinks not of me: I have by good fortune got the key of the garden back-door,—I'll open it to prevent Belville's knocking, a little noise will now alarm my brother. Now am I as fearful as a young thief.—[Unlocks the Door.] Hark,—what noise is that?—Oh! 'twas the wind that play'd amongst the boughs.—Belville stays long, methinks—it's time—stay—for fear of a surprize, I'll hide these jewels in yonder jessamin.
[She goes to lay down the box.]

Enter Willmore drunk.

Wil. What the Devil is become of these fellows, Belville and Frederick? They promis'd to stay at the next corner for me, but who the devil knows the corner of a full moon?—Now—whereabouts am I? hah—what have we here? a garden! a very convenient place to sleep in—hah—what have we got here? a female—by this light, a woman, I'm a dog if it be not a very wench.

Flor. He's come!—hah——who's there?

Wil. Sweet soul, let me salute thy shoe-string.

Flor. 'Tis not my Belville—good heavens, I know him not.—Who are you, and from whence come you?

Wil. Prithee—prithce child—not so many hard questions—let it suffice I am here, Child—come, come kiss me.

Flor. Good Heav'n! what luck is mine.

Wil. Only good luck, child, parlous good luck.—Come hither,—'tis a delicate shining wench,—by this hand she's perfum'd, and smells like a nosegay.—Prithee dear soul, let's not play the fool, and lose time,—precious time—for I'm as honest a fellow as breathes, tho' I'm a little disguis'd at present.—Come, I say—why, thou may'st be free with me, I'll be very secret. I'll not boast who 'twas oblig'd me, not I—for hang me if I know thy name.

Flor. Heavens! what a filthy beast is this!

Wil. I am so, and thou oughtst the sooner to lie with me for that reason,—for look you child, there will be no sin in't, because 'twas neither design'd nor premeditated; tis pure accident on both sides—that's a certain thing now—indeed should I make love to you, and you vow fidelity—and swear and lye till you believ'd and yielded—thou art therefore (as thou art a good christian) oblig'd in conscience to deny me nothing. Now,—come, be kind, without any more idle prating.

Flor. Oh, I am ruin'd—wicked man, unhand me.

Wil. Wicked! egad child, a judge, were he young and vigorous, and saw those eyes of thine, would know 'twas they gave the first blow—the first provocation.—Come, prithee let's lose no time, I say—this is a fine convenient place.

Flor. Sir, let me go, I conjure you, or I'll call out.

Wil.

Wil. Ay, ay, -you were best to call witnesses, to see how finely you treat me——do.——

Flor. I'll cry murder, rape, or any thing, if you do not instantly let me go.

Wil. A rape! come, come, you lye you baggage: what, I'll warrant you would fain have the world believe now that you are not so forward as I. No, not you, —why at this time of night was your cobweb door set open, dear spider——but to catch flies? Hah come——or I shall be damnably angry.——why what a coil is here——

Flor. Sir, can you think——

Wil. That you'd do it for nothing? Oh, oh, I find what you'd be at——look here, here's a pistole for you——here's a work indeed——here——take it, I say.——

Flor. For Heav'n's sake, Sir, as you're a Gentleman——

Wil. So——now——she wou'd be wheedling me for more——what, you will not take it then——you're resolv'd you will not——Come, come, take it, or I'll put it up again; for look ye, I never give more.—Why, how now Mistress, are you so high i'th'mouth, a pistole won't down with you?——hah?——why, what a work's here——in good time——come, no struggling, be gone—But an y'are good at a dumb wrestle, I'm for ye,——I'm for ye.—— [She struggles with him.

Enter Belvile and Frederick.

Belv. The door is open, a pox of this mad fellow, I'm angry that we've lost him, I durst have sworn he had follow'd us.

Fred. But you were so hasty, colonel, to be gone.

Flor. Help, help,——murder!——help——oh, I'm ruin'd.

Belv. Ha, sure that's Florinda's voice. [Comes up to them.

——A man! villain, let go that lady. [A noise.

Flor. Belvile! Heav'n's! my brother too is coming, and 'twill be impossible to escape.——Belvile, I conjure you to walk under my chamber-window, from whence I'll give you some instructions what to do——this rude man has undone us. [Exit.

Wil. Belvile!

Enter Pedro, Stephano, and other servants with lights.

Ped. I'm betray'd; run Stephano, and see if Florinda be safe. [Ex. Step. So whoever they be, all is not well, I'll to Florinda's chamber.

Steph. You need not, Sir, the poor lady's fast asleep, and thinks no harm: I wou'd not awake her, Sir, for fear of frightening her with your danger.

Ped. I'm glad she's there——rascals, how came the garden-door open?

Steph. That question comes too late, Sir, some of my fellow-servants masquerading I'll warrant.

Ped. Masquerading! a leud custom to debauch our youth——there's something more in this than I imagine. [Exeunt.

SCENE Changes to the Street.

Enter Belvile in rage, Frederick bolding him, and Willmore melancholy.

Wil. Why, how the devil shou'd I know Florinda?

Belv. Ah plague of your ignorance! if it had not been Florinda, must you be a beast?—a brute, a senseless swine?

Wil. Well, Sir, you see I'm endu'd with patience—I can bear—tho' egad ye're very free with me methinks.—I was in good hopes the quarrel wou'd have been on my side, for so uncivilly interrupting me.

Belv. Peace, brute, whilst thou'rt safe—oh I'm distracted.

Wil. Nay, nay, I'm an unlucky dog, that's certain.

Belv. Ah curse upon the star that rul'd my birth! or whatsoever other influence that makes me still so wretched.

Wil. Thou break'st my heart with these complaints; there is no star in fault, no influence but sack, the cursed sack I drank.

Fred. Why, how the devil came you so drunk?

Wil. Why, how the devil came you so sober?

Belv. A curse upon his thin skull, he was always before-hand that way.

Fred. Prithee, dear colonel, forgive him, he's sorry for his fault.

Belv. He's always so, after he has done a mischief—a plague on all such brutes.

Wil. By this light I took her for a common harlot:

Belv. Damn your debauch'd opinion: tell me, sot, hadst thou so much sense and light about thee to distinguish her to be a woman. and could'st not see something about her face and person, to strike an awful reverence into thy soul?

Wil. Faith no, I consider'd her as mere a woman as I cou'd wish.

Belv. 'Sdeath I have no patience—draw, or I'll kill you.

Wil. Let that alone 'till to-morrow, and if I set not all right again, use your pleasure.

Belv. To-morrow, damn it.

The spiteful light will lead me to no happiness.

To-morrow is Antonio's, and perhaps

Guides him to my undoing;—oh that I could meet

This rival, this powerful fortunate.

Wil. What then?

Belv. Let thy own reason, or my rage instruct thee.

Wil. I shall be finely inform'd then, no doubt; hear me, colonel—hear me—shew me the man, and I'll do his business.

Belv. I know him no more than thou, or if I did, I should not need thy aid.

Wil. This you say is Angelica's house; I promis'd the kind baggage to lie with her to night. [Offers to go in.

Enter Antonio and his page. Ant. knocks on the hilt of his sword.

Ant. You paid the thousand crowns I directed?

Page. To the Lady's old woman, Sir, I did.

Wil. Who the Devil have we here?

Belv.

Belv. I'll now plant myself under Florinda's window, and if I find no comfort there, I'll die. [Ex. Belv and Fred.]

Enter Moretta.

Moret. Page!

Page. Here my lord.

Wil. How is this, a piccaroon going to board my frigate! here's one chace-gun for you. [Drawing his sword, justles Ant. who turns and draws. They fight. Ant. falls.]

Moret. Oh, blefs us, we are undone! [Runs in and shuts the door.]

Belv. Ha, the mad rogue's engag'd in some unlucky adventure again.

Enter two or three Masqueraders.

Masq. Ha, a man kill'd!

Wil. How! a man kill'd! then I'll go home to sleep.

[Puts up and reels out. Ex. Masquers another way.]

Belv. Who shou'd it be! Pray Heaven the rogue is safe, for all my quarrel to him [As Belvile is groping about, enter an officer and six soldiers.]

Sold. Who's there?

Offic. So, here's one dispatch——secure the murderer.

Belv. Do not mistake my charity for murder:

I came to his assistance.

[Soldiers seize on Belvile.]

Offic. That shall be tried, Sir.——St. Jago, swords drawn in the carnival time!

[Goes to Antonio.]

Ant. Thy hand prithee.

Offic. Ha, Don Antonio! Look well to the villain there——

How is't, Sir?

Ant. I'm hurt.

Belv. Has my humanity made me a criminal?

Offic. Away with him.

Belv. What a curst chance is this! [Ex. Soldiers with Belv.]

Ant. This is the man that has fet upon me twice——carry him to my apartment till you have farther orders from me. [To the officer. Ex. Ant. led.]

ACT IV. SCENE I.

A fine Room.

Discovers Belvile, as by Dark alone.

Belv. OH! when shall I be weary of railing on fortune, who is resolv'd never to turn with smiles upon me?—Two such defeats in one night—none but the devil and that mad rogue could have contriv'd to have plagued me with—I am here a prisoner—but where? Heaven knows—and if there be murder done, I can soon decide the fate of a stranger in a nation without mercy—Yet this is nothing to the torture my soul bows with, when I think of losing my fair, my dear Florinda—Hark—my door opens—a light—a man—and seems of quality—arm'd tooo.—Now shall I die like a dog without defence.

Enter Antonio in a Night-Gown, with a light; his Arm in a Scarf, and a sword under his Arm: He sets the Candle on the Table.

Ant. Sir, I come to know what injuries I have done you, that could provoke you to so mean an action, as to attack me basely, without allowing time for my defence.

Belv. Sir, for a man in my circumstances to plead innocence, would look like fear—but view me well, and you will find no marks of a coward on me, nor any thing that betrays that brutality which you accuse me of.

Ant. In vain, Sir, you impose upon my sense,
You are not only he who drew on me last night,
But yesterday before the same house, that of Angelica.
Yet there is something in your face and mien—

Belv. I own I fought to day in the defence of a friend of a mine, with whom you (if you're the same) and your party were first engag'd. Perhaps you think this crime enough to kill me, But if you do, I cannot fear you'll do it basely.

Ant. No, Sir, I'll make you fit for a defence with this.

[Gives him the Sword.]

Belv. This gallantry surprizes me—nor know I how to use this present, Sir, against a man so brave.

Ant. You shall not need;
For know, I come to snatch you from a Danger
That is decreed against you;

Perhaps

Perhaps your life, or long imprisonment :
And 'twas with so much courage you offended,
I cannot see you punisht.

Belv. How shall I pay this generosity ?

Ant. It had been faster to have kill'd another,
Than have attempted me :

To shew your danger, Sir, I'll let you know my Quality ;
And 'tis the Vice-Roy's son whom you have wounded.

Belv. The Vice-Roy's son !

Death and confusion ! Was this plague reserved
To compleat all the rest ?——oblig'd by him !
The man of all the world I won'd destroy.

Ant. You seem disorder'd, Sir.

Belv. Yes, trust me, Sir, I am, and 'tis with pain
That man receives such bounties,
Who wants the pow'r to pay 'em back again.

Ant. To gallant spirits 'tis indeed uneasy ;
——But you may quickly over-pay me, Sir.

Belv. Then I am well——kind Heaven ! But set us even,
That I may fight with him, and keep my honour safe.

——Oh, I'm impatient, Sir, to be discounting
The mighty debt I owe you ; command me quickly——

Ant. I have a quarrel with a rival, Sir,
About the maid we love.

Belv. Death, 'tis Florinda he means——
That thought destroys my reason, and I shall kill him——

Ant. My rival, Sir,
Is one has all the virtues man can boast of.

Belv. Death ! Who shou'd this be ?

Ant. He challeng'd me to meet him on the Molo,
As soon as day appear'd ; but last night's quarrel
Has made my arm unfit to guide a sword.

Belv. I apprehend you, Sir, you'd have me kill the man
That lays a claim to the maid you speak of.
——I'll do't——I'll fly to do't.

Ant. Sir, do you know her ?

Belv. ——No, Sir, but 'tis enough she's admir'd by you,

Ant. Sir, I shall rob you of the glory on't,
For you must fight under my name and drefs.

Belv. That opinion must be strangely obliging that makes you think I can personate the brave Antonio, whom I can but strive to imitate.

Ant. You say too much to my advantage.

Come, Sir, the day appears that calls you forth.
Within, Sir, is the habit.

Belv. Fantastick fortune, thou deceitful light,
That cheats the wearied Traveller by Night,
Tho' on a precipice each step you tread,
I am resolv'd to follow where you lead,

SCENE The Mole.

Enter Florinda and Callis in Masques, with Stephano.

Flor. I'm dying with my fears; Belvile's not coming,
As I expected, underneath my window,
Makes me believe that all those fears are true. [Aside.

—Canst thou not tell with whom my brother fights?

Steph. No, Madam, they were both in Masquerade, I was by when they challeng'd one another, they had decided the quarrel then, but were prevented by some Cavaliers; which made 'em put it off till now—— but I am sure 'tis about you they fight.

Flor. Nay then 'tis with Belvile, for what other lover have I that dares fight for me, except Antonio? and he is too much in favour with my brother——If it be he, for whom shall I direct my prayers to Heaven?

Steph. Indeed, Madam, I must leave you: for if my master see me, I shall be hang'd for being your conductor.——I escap'd narrowly for the excuse I made for you last night i'th' garden.

Flor. And I'll reward thee for't——prithee no more. [Exit Steph.

Enter Don Pedro in his Masque Habit.

Pedro. Antonio's late to day, the place will fill, and we may be prevented. [Walks about.

Flor. Antonio! Sure my ears deceiv'd me. [Aside.

Pedro. But who wou'd not excuse a happy lover,
When soft fair arms confine the yielding neck;
And the kind whisper languishingly breathes,
Must you be gone so soon?
Sure I had dwelt for ever on her bosom.

——But stay, he's here.

Enter Belvile dress'd in Antonio's Clothes.

Flor. 'Tis not Belvile, half my fears are vanisht.

Pedro. Antonio!——

Belv. This must be he. [Aside.

You're early, Sir,—I do not use to be out-done this way.

Pedro. The wretched, Sir, are watchful, and 'tis enough you have the advantage of me in Angelica.

Belv. Angelica! Or I've mistook my man! Or else Antonio,
Can he forget his interest in Florinda,
And fight for common Prize? [Aside.

Pedro. Come, Sir, you know our terms——

Belv. By Heaven, not I. [Aside.

—No talking, I am ready, Sir. [Offers to fight, Flor. runs in.

Flor. Oh, hold! Whoe'er you be, I do conjure you hold. [To Belv.

Pedro. Florinda!

Belv. Florinda imploring for my rival!

Pedro.

Pedro. Away, this kindness is unseasonable.

[Puts her by, they fight; she runs in just as Belv. disarms Pedro.]

Flor. Who are you, Sir, that dare deny my prayers?

Belv. Thy prayers destroy him; if thou would'st preserve him,

Do that thou'rt unacquainted with, and curse him. [She holds him.]

Flor. By all you hold most dear, by her you love,

I do conjure you, touch him not.

Belv. By her I love!

See———I obey———and at your feet resign

The useleſs Trophy of my Victory. [Lays his sword at her Feet.]

Pedro. Antonio, you've done enough to prove you love Florinda.

Belv. Love Florinda!

Does Heav'n love Adoration, Pray'r, or Penitence?

Love her! Here Sir,——your sword again.

[Snatches up the sword, and gives it him.]

Upon this Truth I'll fight my life away.

Ped. No, you've redeem'd my ſiſter, and my friendship!

Belv. Don Pedro!

[He gives him Flor. and pulls off his Vizard to ſhew his Face, and puts it on again.]

Pedro. Can you resign your claims to other women,

And give your heart intirely to Florinda?

Belv. Intire, as dying ſaints confeſſions are.

I can delay my happineſs no longer.

This minute let me make Florinda mine?

Pedro. This minute let it be———no time ſo proper,

This night my father will arrive from Rome,

And poſſibly may hinder our intentions.

Flor. Oh Heavens! This Minute!

[Enter Maſquerades, and paſs over.]

Belv. Oh, do not ruin me!

Pedro. The place begins to fill; and that we may not be obſerv'd, do you walk off to St. Peter's Church, where I will meet you, and conclude your happineſs.

Belv. I'll meet you there———if there be no more ſaints churches in Naples. [Aſide.]

Flor. Oh ſtay, Sir, and recall your haſty doom:

Alas I have not yet prepar'd my heart

To entertain ſo ſtrange a gueſt.

Pedro. Away, this filly modeſty is aſſum'd too late.

Belv. Heaven, Madam! What do you do?

Flor. Do! Deſpiſe the man that lays a tyrant's claim

To what he ought to conquer by ſubmiſſion.

Belv. You do not know me——move a little this way. [Draws her aſide.]

Flor. Yes, you may even force me to the Altar,

But not the holy man that offers there

Shall force me to be thine.

[Pedro talks to Callis this while.]

Belv.

Belv. Oh do not lose so blest an opportunity!
See——'tis your Belvile — not Antonio,
Whom your mistaken scorn and anger ruins.

Flor. Belvile!

Where was my foul it cou'd not meet thy voice,
And take this knowledge in?

[As they are talking, enter Willmore finely dress'd, and Frederick.

Wil. No intelligence! No news of Belvile yet——well I am the most unlucky rascal in nature——ha! am I deceiv'd— or is it he——look.

Fred. 'Tis he——my dear Belvile.

[Vizard falls out of his hand, runs and embraces him.

Belv. Hell and confusion seize thee!

Pedro. Ha! Belvile! I beg your pardon, Sir. [Takes Flor. from him.

Belv. Nay, touch her not, she's mine by conquest, Sir.

I won her by my sword.

Wil. Did'st thou so—and egad, child, we'll keep her by the sword.

Belv. Stand off.

Thou'rt so profanely leud, so curst by heaven,
All Quarrels thou espoudest must be fatal.

Wil. Nay, an you be so hot, my Valour's coy, and shall be courted when you want it next. [Puts up his Sword.

Belv. You know I ought to claim a Victor's right, [To Pedro.

But you're the brother to the divine Florinda,
To whom I'm such a slave——to purchase her,
I durst not hurt the man she holds so dear.

Pedro. 'Twas by Antonio's, not by Belvile's sword,

This question should have been decided, Sir:

I must confess much to your bravery's due,

Both now, and when I met you last in arms.

But I am nicely punctual in my word,

As men of honour ought, and beg your pardon.

——For this mistake another time shall clear:

——This was some plot between you and Belvile:

But I'll prevent you.

Belv. looks after her, and begins to walk up and down in a Rage.

Wil. Do not be modest now, and lose the woman: but if we shall fetch her back, so——

Belv. Do not speak to me.

Wil. Not speak to you!——Egad I'll speak to you, and will be answered too.

Belv. Will you, Sir?

Wil. I know I've done some mischief, but I'm so dull a puppy, that I am a son of a whore, if I know how, or where——prithee inform my understanding.——

Belv. Leave me I say, and leave me instantly.

Wil. I will not leave you in this humour, nor till I know my crime.

Belv.

Belv. Death, I'll tell you, Sir——

[Draws and runs at Wil. he runs out; Belv. after him, Fred interposes.]

Enter Angelica, Moretta, and Sebastian.

Ang. Ha——Sebastian——Is not that Willmore? haste, haste, and bring him back.

Fred. The Colonel's mad——I never saw him thus before; I'll after 'em, lest he do some mischief, for I am sure Willmore will not draw on him. [Exit.]

Ang. I am all rage! My first desires defeated for one for ought he knows, that has no other merit than her quality,——her being Don Pedro's sister——He loves her:

I know 'tis so——dull, dull, insensible——
He will not see me now tho' oft invited;
And broke his word last night——false perjur'd man!
——He that but yesterday fought for my favours,
And would have made his life a sacrifice
To've gain'd one night with me,
Must now be hired and courted to my arms.

Moret. I told you what wou'd come on't, but Moretta's an old doating fool——Why did you give him five hundred crowns to set himself out for other lovers? You shou'd have kept him poor, if you had intended to have had any good from him.

Ang. Oh, name not such mean trifles——
Had I given him all my youth has earn'd from sin,
I had not lost a thought nor sigh upon't.
But I have given him my eternal rest,
My whole repose, my future Joys, my heart,
My Virgin heart. Moretta! Oh 'tis gone!

Moret. Curse on the rascal, here he comes;
How fine she has made him too!

Enter Willmore and Sebast. Ang. turns and walks away.

Wil. How now, are you turn'd shadow?
Fly when I pursue, and follow when I fly!

[sings.]

Stay gentle Shadow of my Dove,
And tell me ere I go,
Whether the Substance may not prove
A fleeting Thing like you.

There's a soft kind look remaining yet. [As she turns she looks on him.]

Ang. Well, Sir, you may be gay; all happiness, all joys pursue you still, fortune's your slave, and gives you every hour choice of new hearts and beauties, till you are cloy'd with the repeated bliss, which others vainly languish for——But know, false man, that I shall be reveng'd.

[Turns away in a Rage.]

Wil. So, 'gad, there are of those faint-hearted lovers, whom such a sharp lesson next their hearts would make as impotent as fourscore—— pox o' this whining——my bus'ness is to laugh and love——a pox on't; I hate your sullen lover; a man shall lose as much time to put you in humour now, as would serve to gain a new woman.

Ang. I scorn to cool that fire I cannot raise,

Or do the drudgery of your virtuous mistress.

Wil. A virtuous mistress! Death, what a thing thou hast found out for me! Why what the devil should I do with a virtuous woman?——a sort of ill-natured creatures, that take a pride to torment a lover. Virtue is but an infirmity in women, a disease that renders even the handsome ungrateful; whilst the ill-favour'd, for want of solicitations and address, only fancy themselves so.——I have lain with a woman of quality, who has been railing at whores all the while.

Ang. I will not answer for your Mistress's virtue,

Tho' she be young enough to know no guilt:

And I could wish you would persuade my heart,

'Twas the two hundred thousand crowns you courted.

Wil. Two hundred thousand crowns! What story's this?——What trick?——What woman?——Ha.

Ang. How strange you make it! Have you forgot the creature you entertain'd on the Piazza last night?

Wil. Ha, my gipsy worth two hundred thousand crowns!——Oh! how I long to be with her——pox, I knew she was a woman of quality. [Aside.]

Ang. False man, I see my ruin in thy face.

How many vows you breath'd upon my bosom,

Never to be unjust——have you forgot so soon?

Wil. Faith no, I was just coming to repeat 'em——but here's a humour indeed——would make a man a faint——Wou'd she'd be angry enough to leave me, and command me not to wait on her. [Aside.]

Enter Hellena, dress'd in Men's Clothes.

Hel. This must be Angelica, I know it by her mumping matron here—Ay, ay, 'tis she; my mad Captain's with her too, for all his swearing——how this inconstant humour makes me love him:——Pray, good grave gentlewoman, is not this Angelica?

Moret. My too young sir, it is——I hope 'tis one from Don Antonio. [Goes to Angelica.]

Hel. Well something I'll do to vex him for this. [Aside.]

Ang. I will not speak with him; am I in humour to receive a lover?

Wil. Not speak with him! Why, I'll be gone——and wait your idler minutes——Can I shew less obedience to the thing I love so fondly? [Offers to go.]

Ang. A fine excuse this——stay——

Wil. And hinder your advantage: Should I repay your bounties so ungratefully?

Ang. Come hither, boy——that I may let you see
How much above the advantages you name
I prize one minute's joy with you.

Wil.

Wil. Oh, you destroy me with this endearment. [Impatient to be gone.
 ———— Death, how shall I get away? ———— Madam, 'twill not be fit I should be seen with you ———— besides, it will not be convenient ———— and I've a friend — that's dangerously sick, and I must visit him.

Ang. I see you're impatient ———— yet you shall stay.

Wil. And miss my assignation with my gipsy.

Hel. Madam, [Moretta brings Hellena, who addresses her self to You'll hardly pardon my intrusion, [Angelica.
 When you shall know my business;
 And I'm too young to tell my tale with art:
 But there must be a wond'rous store of goodness
 Where so much beauty dwells.

Ang. A pretty advocate, whoever sent thee,
 ———— Prithee proceed ———— Nay Sir, you shall not go.

[To Will. who is stealing off.

Wil. Then shall I lose my dear gipsy for ever.
 ———— Pox on't, she stays me out of spite.

Hel. I am related to a lady, madam,
 Young, rich, and nobly born, but has the fate
 To be in love with a young English gentleman.
 Strangely she loves him, at first sight she lov'd him,
 But did adore him when she heard him speak;
 For he, she said, had charms in every word,
 That fail'd not to surprize, to wound, and conquer ————

Wil. Ha, egad, I hope this concerns me. [Aside.

Ang. 'Tis my false man, he means ———— wou'd he were gone. This praise will raise his pride and ruin me ———— Well, since you are so impatient to be gone, I will release you, Sir. [To Will.

Wil. Nay, then I'm sure 'twas me he spoke of, this cannot be the effects of kindness in her. [Aside.

——— No, Madam, I've consider'd better on't,
 And will not give you cause of Jealousy.

Ang. But, Sir, I've ———— business, that ————

Wil. This shall not do, I know 'tis but to try me.

Ang. Well, to your story, boy, ———— tho' 'twill undo me. [Aside.

Hel. With this addition to his other beauties,
 He won her unresisting tender heart,
 He vow'd and sigh'd, and swore he lov'd her dearly;
 And she believ'd the cunning flatterer,
 And thought her self the happiest maid alive:
 To day was the appointed time by both,
 To consummate their bliss;
 The Virgin, Altar, and the Priest were dress'd,
 And whilst she languish'd for the expected bridegroom,
 She heard, he paid his broken vows to you.

Wil. So, this is some dear rogue that's in love with me, and this way lets me know it; or if it is not me, she means some one whose place I may supply. [Aside.

Ang.

Ang. Now I perceive the cause of thy impatience to be gone, and all the business of this glorious dress.

Wil. Damn the young prater, I know not what he means.

Hel. Madam,

In your fair eyes I read too much concern
To tell my father business.

Ang. Prithce, sweet youth, talk on, thou may'st perhaps Raise here a storm that may undo my passion,
And then I'll grant thee any thing.

Hel. Madam, 'tis to intreat you, (oh unreasonable!)
You wou'd not see this stranger;
For if you do, she vows you are undone,
Tho' nature never made a man so excellent;
And sure he'ad been a God, but for inconstancy.

Wil. Ah, rogue, how finely he's instructed! [Aside.]
—'Tis plain some woman that has seen me en passant.

Ang. Oh, I shall burst with jealousy! Do you know the man you speak of?—

Hel. Yes, madam, he us'd to be in buff and scarlet.

Ang. Thou, false as hell, what canst thou say to this? [To Wil.]

Wil. By heaven—

Ang. Hold, do not damn thyself—

Hel. Not hope to be believ'd. [He walks about, they follow.]

Ang. Oh, perjurd man!

Is't thus you pay my generous passion back?

Hel. Why wou'd you, Sir, abuse my lady's faith?

Ang. And use me so inhumanly?

Hel. A maid so young, so innocent—

Wil. Ah, young devil!

Ang. Dost thou not know thy life is in my power?

Hel. Or think my lady cannot be reveng'd?

Wil. So, so, the storm comes finely on. [Aside.]

Ang. Now thou art silent, guilt has struck thee dumb.

Oh, hadst thou still been so, I'd liv'd in safety. [She turns away and weeps.]

Wil. Sweetheart, the lady's name and house—quickly: I'm impatient to be with her.—

Aside to Hellena, looks towards Angel, to watch her turning; and as she comes towards, he meets her.

Hel. So now is he for another woman. [Aside.]

Wil. The impudent 'st young thing in nature!

I cannot persuade him out of his error, madam.

Ang. I know he's in the right,—yet thou'st a tongue
That wou'd persuade him to deny his faith. [In rage walks away.]

Wil. Her name, her name, dear boy— [Said softly to Hell.]

Hel. Have you forgot it, Sir?

Wil. Oh, I perceive he's not to know I am a stranger to his lady. [Aside.]
—Yes, yes, I do know—but—I have forgot the— [Angel turns.]

—By heaven, such early confidence I never saw.

Ang.

Ang. Did I not charge you with this mistress, Sir?
Which you denied, tho' I beheld your perjury.
This little generosity of thine has render'd back my heart. [Walks away.]

Wil. So, you have made sweet work here, my little mischief; look your lady be kind and good natur'd now, or I shall have but a cursed bargain on't. [Ang. turns towards them.]

— The rogue's bred up to mischief,
Art thou so great a fool to credit him?

Ang. Yes, I do; and you in vain impose upon me.

— Come hither, boy— is not this the man you speak of?

Hel. I think—— it is; I cannot swear, but I vow he has just such another lying lover's look. [Hel. looks in his face, he gazes on her.]

Wil. Hah! do I not know that face?

By heaven, my little gypsy! what a dull dog was I?

Had I but lookt that way, I'd known her.

Are all my hopes of a new woman banisht?

[Aside.]

— Egad, if I don't fit thee for this, hang me.

— Madam, I have found out the plot.

Hel. O lord, what does he say? am I discover'd now?

Wil. Do you see this young spark here?

Hel. He'll tell her who I am.

Wil. Who do you think this is?

Hel. Ay, ay, he does know me.— Nay, dear captain, I'am undone if you discover me.

Wil. Nay, nay, no cogging; she shall know what a precious mistress I have.

Hel. Will you be such a devil?

Wil. Nay, nay, I'll teach you to spoil sport you will not make—

This small ambassador comes not from a person of quality, as you imagine, and he says; but from a very errant gypsy, the talkingst, pratingst, cantingst little animal thou ever saw'st.

Ang. What news you tell me! that's the thing I mean.

Hel. Wou'd I were well off the place.— If ever I go a captain hunting again.— [Aside.]

Wil. Mean that thing? that gypsy thing? thou may'st as well be jealous of thy monkey, or parrot as her: a German motion were worth a dozen of her, and a dream were a better enjoyment, a creature of a constitution fitter for heaven than man.

Hel. Tho' I'm sure he lyes, yet I confels this vexes me. [Aside.]

Ang. You are mistaken, she's a Spanish woman made up of no such dull materials.

Wil. Materials! Egad, an she be made of any that will either dispense, or admit of love, I'll be bound to continence.

Hel. Unreasonable man, do you think so? [Aside to him.]

Wil. You may return, my little brazen head, and tell your lady, that till she be handfom enough to be belov'd, or I dull enough to be religious, there will be very small hopes of me.

Ang. Did you not promise then to marry her?

Wil. Not I by heaven.

Ang.

Ang. You cannot undeceive my fears and torments, till you have vow'd you will not marry her.

Hel. If he swears that, he'll be reveng'd on me indeed for all my rogueries.

Ang. I know what arguments you'll bring against me, fortune and honour.

Wil. Honour! I tell you, I hate it in your sex; and those that fancy themselves possess'd of that foppery, are the most impertinently troublesome of all woman kind, and will transgress nine commandments to keep one: and to satisfy your jealousy I swear——

Hel. Oh, no swearing, dear captain—— [Aside to him.]

Wil. If it were possible I should ever be inclined to marry, it should be some kind young sinner, one that has generosity enough to give a favour handsomely to one that can ask it discreetly, one that has wit enough to manage an intrigue of love——oh, how civil such a wench is, to a man that does her the honour to marry her.

Ang. By heaven there's no faith in any thing he says.

Enter Sebastian.

Sebast. Madam, Don Antonio——

Ang. Come hither.

Hel. Ha, Antonio! he may be coming hither, and he'll certainly discover me, I'll therefore retire without a ceremony. [Exit Hellena.]

Ang. I'll see him, get my coach ready.

Sebast. It waits you, Madam.

Wil. This is lucky: what, Madam, now I may be gone and leave you to the enjoyment of my rival?

Ang. Dull man, that canst not see how ill, how poor That false dissimulation looks——Be gone, And never let me see thy cozening face again, Lest I relapse and kill thee.

Wil. Yes, you can spare me now,——farewel till you are in better humour——I'm glad of this release——

Now for my gipsy:

What tho' for worse we change, yet still we find
New joys, new charms, in a new mistress's kind.

[Ex. Wil.]

Ang. He's gone, and in this ague of my soul
The shivering fit again returns;

Oh with what willing haste he took his leave,
As if the long for minute were arriv'd,
Of some blest assignation.

In vain have I consulted all my charms,
In vain this beauty priz'd in vain believ'd
My eyes cou'd kindle any lasting fires.
I had forgot my name, my infamy,
And the reproach that honour lays on those
That dare pretend a sober passion here.

Nice reputation, tho' it leave behind
More virtue than inhabit where that dwells,
Yet that once gone, those virtues shine no more.

——Then since I am not fit to be belov'd,

I am resolv'd to think on some revenge

On him that sooth'd me thus to my undoing [Exeunt.]

SCENE

SCENE III. A Street.

Enter Florinda and Valeria in habits different from what they have been seen in.

Flor. We're happily escap'd, yet I tremble still.

Val. A lover and fear! why, I am but half a one; and yet I have courage for any attempt. Would Hellena were here. I wou'd fain have had her as deep in this mischief as we, she'll fare but ill else I doubt.

Flor. She pretended a visit to the Augustine nuns, but I believe some other design carried her out, prays heavens we light on her.

———Prithee what didst do with Callix?

Val. When I saw no reason wou'd do good on her, I follow'd her into the wardrobe, and as she was looking for something in a great chest, I tumbled her in by the heels, snatch'd the key of the apartment where you were confin'd, lock'd her in, and left her bauling for help.

Flor. 'Tis well you resolv'd to follow my fortunes, for thou dar'st never appear at home again after such an action.

Val. That's according as the young stranger and I shall agree——— But our business——— I deliver'd your note to Belvile; when I got out under pretence of going to mass, I found him at his lodging, and believe me it came seasonably, for never was a man in so desperate a condition. I told him of your resolution of making your escape to day, if your brother would be absent long enough to permit you; if not, that you would die rather than be Antonio's.

Flor. Thou shou'dst have told him I was confin'd to my chamber upon my brother's suspicion, that the business on the Molo was a plot laid between him and I.

Val. I said all this, and told him your brother was now gone to his devotion, and he resolves to visit every church till he find him; and not only undeceive him in that, but cares him so as shall delay his return home.

Flor. Oh heavens! he's there, and Belvile with him too.

[They put on their Vizards.]

Enter Don Pedro, Belvilc, Willmore; Belvile and Don Pedro seeming in serious discourse.

Val. Walk boldly by them, I'll come at a distance, lest he suspect us. She walks by them, and looks back on them.

Wil. Ha! woman! and of an excellene mien!

Ped. She throws a kind look back on you.

Wil. Death; 'tis a likely wench; and that kind look shall not be thrown away—— I'll follow her.

Belv. Prithee do not.

Wil. Do not! by heavens to the antipodes, with such an invitation.

[She goes out, and Willmore follows.]

Belv. 'Tis a mad fellow for a wench.

Enter

Enter Frederick.

Fred. Oh colonel, such news!

Belv. Prithee what?

Fred. News that will make you laugh in spite of fortune.

Belv. What, Blunt has had some damn'd trick put upon him, cheated, bang'd, or clap'd I suppose?

Fred. Cheated, Sir, rarely, cheated of all but his shirt and drawers; the unconscionable whore too turn'd him out before consummation, so that traversing the streets at midnight, the watch found him in this fresco, and conducted him home: by heaven 'tis such a sight, and yet I durst as well have been hang'd as laugh at him, or pity him; he beats all that do but ask him a question, and is in such a devilish humour.——

Ped. Who is't has met with this ill usage, Sir?

Belv. A friend of ours, whom you must see for mirth's sake. I'll employ him to give Florinda time for an escape. [Aside.

Ped. What is he?

Belv. A young countryman of ours, one that has been educated at so plentiful a rate, he ne'er yet knew the want of money, and 'twill be a great jest to see how simply he'll look without it. For my part I'll lend him none, and the rogue knows not how to put on a borrowing face, and ask first. I'll let him see how good 'tis to play our parts whilst I play his——Prithee Fred. do you go home and keep him in that posture till we come. [Exeunt.

Enter Florinda from the farther end of the scene, looking behind her.

Flor. I am follow'd still—hah—my brother too advancing this way, good heavens defend me from being seen by him. [She goes off.

Enter Willmore, and after him Valeria, at a little distance.

Wil. Ah! There she fails, she looks back as if she were willing to be boarded, I'll warrant her prize. [He goes out, Valeria following.

Enter Hellena, just as he goes out, with a page.

Hel. Hah, is not that my captain that has a woman in chase?—'tis not Angelica, Boy, follow those people at a distance, and bring me an account where they go in——I'll find his haunts, and plague him every where.——Ha——my brother! [Exit page.

[Bel. Will. Ped. cross the stage: Hel. runs off,

Scene changes to another street. Enter Florinda.

Flor. What shall I do? my brother now pursues me. Will no kind power protect me from this tyranny?

——Hah, here's a door open, I'll venture in, since nothing can be worse than to fall into his hands, my life and honour are at stake, and my necessity has no choice. [She goes in.

Enter

Enter Valeria, and Hellena's Page peeping after Florinda.

Pag. Here she went in, I shall remember this house. [Exit boy.]

Val. This is Belwile's lodgings; she's gone in as readily as if she knew it—hah—here's that mad fellow again, I dare not venture in; I'll watch my opportunity. [Goes aside.]

Enter Willmore, gazing about him.

Wil. I have lost her hereabouts—Pox on't she must not escape me so. [Goes out.]

Scene changes to Blunt's chamber, discovers him sitting on a couch in his shirt and drawers, reading.

Blunt. So, now my mind's a little at peace, since I have resolv'd revenge—A pox on this taylor tho', for not bringing home the clothes I bespoke; and a pox of all poor cavaliers, a man can never keep a spare suit for 'em; and I shall have these rogues come in and find me naked, and then I'm undone; but I'm resolv'd to arm myself—the rascals shall not insult over me too much. [Puts on an old rusty sword and buff belt.]—Now, how like a morris-dancer I am equipt—a fine lady-like whore to cheat me thus, without affording me a kindness for my money; a pox light on her, I shall never be reconciled to the sex more; she has made me as faithless as a physician, as uncharitable as a churchman, and as ill-natur'd as a poet. O how I'll use all womenkind hereafter! what wou'd I give to have one of 'em within my reach now! any mortal thing in petticoats, kind fortune, send me; and I'll forgive thy last night's malice—Here's a cursed book too, (a warning to all young travellers) that can instruct me how to prevent such mischiefs now 'tis too late. Well 'tis a rare convenient thing to read a little now and then, as well as hawk and hunt. [Sits down again and reads.]

Enter to him Florinda.

Flor. This house is haunted sure, 'tis well furnish'd and no living thing inhabits it—hah—a man! Heav'n's how he's attir'd! sure 'tis some rope-dancer, or fencing-master; I tremble now for fear, and yet I must venture now to speak to him—Sir, if I may not interrupt your meditations— [He starts up and gazes.]

Blunt. Hah—what's here? Are my wishes granted? and is not that a the creature? Adsheartlikins 'tis! what wretched thing art thou—hah!

Flor. Charitable Sir, you've told yourself already what I am; a very wretched maid, forc'd by a strange unlucky accident, to seek a safety here, and must be ruin'd, if you do not grant it.

Blunt. Ruin'd! Is there any ruin so inevitable as that which now threatens thee? Dost thou know, miserable woman, into what den of mischiefs thou art fall'n? what a bliss of confusion?—hah—dost not see something in my looks that frights thy guilty soul, and makes thee wish to change that shape of woman for any humble animal, or devil? for those were safer for thee and less mischievous.

Flor. Alas, what mean you, Sir? I must confess your looks have something in 'em makes me fear; but I beseech you, as you seem a gentleman, pity a harmless virgin, that takes your house for sanctuary.

G

Blunt.

Blunt. Talk on, talk on, and weep too, till my faith return. Do flatter me out of my senses again———a harmless virgin with a pox as much one as t'other, adsheartlikins. Why, what the Devil can I not be safe in my house for you? not in my chamber? nay, even being naked too cannot secure me. This is an impudence greater than has invaded me yet.—Come no resistance. [Pulls her rudely]

Flor. Dare you be so cruel?

Blunt. Cruel! Adsheartlikins as a galley-slave, or a Spanish whore: cruel, yes, I will kiss and beat thee all over; kiss, and see thee all over; thou shalt lie with me too, not that I care for the enjoyment, but to let you see I have ta'en deliberated malice to thee, and will be reveng'd on one whore for the sins of another; I will smile and deceive thee, flatter thee, and beat thee, kiss and swear, and lye to thee, embrace thee and rob thee, as she did me, fawn on thee, and strip thee stark naked, then hang thee out at my window by the heels, with a paper of scurvy verses fallen'd to thy breast, in praise of damnable women—come, come along.

Flor. Alas, Sir, must I be sacrific'd for the crimes of the most infamous of my sex? I never understood the sins you name.

Blunt. Do, persuade the fool you love him, or that one of you can be just or honest; tell me I was not an easy coxcomb, or any strange impossible tale: it will be believ'd sooner than thy false shows or protestations. A generation of damn'd hypocrites, to flatter my very clothes from my back! dissembling witches! are these the returns you make an honest gentleman that trusts, believes, and loves you?———But if I be not even with you———come along. or I shall———[Pulls her again.]

Enter Frederick.

Fred. Ha, what's here to do?

Blunt. Adsheartlikins, Fred. I am glad thou art come, to be a witness of my dire revenge.

Fred. What's this, a person of quality too, who is upon the ramble to supply the defects of some grave impotent husband.

Blunt. No, this has another pretence, some very unfortunate accident brought her hither, to save a life pursu'd by I know not who, or why, and forc'd to take sanctuary here at a fool's haven. Adsheartlikins, to me of all mankind for protection? Is the ass to be cajol'd again think ye? No, young one, no prayers or tears shall mitigate my rage; therefore prepare for both my pleasure of enjoyment and revenge, for I am resolv'd to make up my loss here on thy body, I'll take it out in kindness and in beating.

Fred. Now mistress, what do you think of this?

Flor. I think he will not———dares not be so barbarous.

Fred. Have a care, Blunt; she fetch'd a deep sigh, she is enamour'd with thy shirt and drawers, she'll strip thee even of that. There are of her calling such unconscionable baggages, and such dextrous thieves, they'll flea a man, and he shall ne'er miss his skin, till he feels the cold. There was a countryman of ours robb'd of a row of teeth, whilst he was sleeping, which the jilt made him buy again when he awak'd.

Blunt. 'Dsheartlikins, why, this is most abominable.

Flor. Some such devils there may be, but by all that's holy, I am no such, I enter'd here to save a life in danger.

Blunt.

Blunt. For no goodness I'll warrant her.

Fred. Faith, damsel, you had better confess the plain truth, for we are fellows not to be caught twice in the same trap: look on that wreck, a tight vessel when he set out of haven, well trim'd and laden, and see how a female piccaroon of this island of rogues has shatter'd him, and canst thou hope for any mercy.

Blunt. No, no, gentlewoman, come along, adsheartlikins we must be better acquainted—we'll both lie with her, and then let me alone to bang her.

Fred. I am very ready to serve you in matters of revenge, that has a double pleasure in't.

Blunt. Well said, you hear, little one, how you are condemn'd by publick vote to the bed within, there's no resisting your destiny, sweet-heart.

Flor. Stay, Sir, I have seen you with Belvile, an English cavalier, for his sake use me kindly; you know him, Sir.

Blunt. Belvile! why, yes, sweeting, we do know Belvile, and wish he were with us now, he's a cormorant at whore and bacon, he'd have a limb or two of thee, my virgin pullet: but 'tis no matter, we'll leave him the bones to pick.

Flor. Sir, if you have any esteem for that Belvile, I conjure you to treat me with more gentleness; he'll thank you for the justice.

Fred. Hark ye, Blunt, I doubt we are mistaken in this matter.

Flor. Sir, if you find me not worth Belvile's care, use me as you please; and that you may think I merit better treatment than you threaten—pray take this present——

Blunt. Hum—A diamond! why, 'tis a wonderful virtue now that lies in this ring, a mollifying virtue; adsheartlikins there's more persuasive rhetoric in't than all her dear bewitching sex can utter.

Fred. I begin to suspect something; and 'twou'd anger us vilely to be trust'd up for a rape upon a maid of quality, when we only believe we ruffle a harlot.

Blunt. Thou art a credulous fellow, but adsheartlikins I have no faith yet; why, my saint prattled as parlously as this does, she gave me a bracelet too, a devil on her: but I sent my man to sell it today for necessaries, and it prov'd as counterfeit as her vows of love.

Fred. However let it reprieve her till we see Belvile.

Blunt. That's hard, yet I will grant it.

Enter a servant.

Serv. Oh, Sir, the colonel is just come with his new friend and a Spaniard of quality, and talks of inviting you to dinner with 'em.

Blunt. 'Dsheartlikins, I'm undone—I wou'd not see 'em for the world: Harkye, Fred. lock up the wench in your chamber.

Fred. Fear nothing, madam, whatever he threatens, you're safe whilst in my hands.

Blunt. And sirrah—upon your life, say—I am not at home—or that I am asleep—or—or any thing—away—I'll prevent their coming this way.

ACT V. SCENE I.

Blunt's Room.

After a great knocking at his Chamber-door, enter Blunt softly, crossing the Stage in his Shirt and Drawers, as before.

H ALLO! Ned, Ned Blunt, Ned Blunt. [Call within.
Blunt. The rogues are up in arms, 'dsheartlikins, this villainous Frederick has betray'd me, they have heard of my blessed fortune.

Ned Blunt, Ned, Ned——— [And knocking within.

Belw. Why, he's dead, Sir, without dispute dead, he has not been seen to day; let's break open the door——here——Boy———

Blunt. Ha, break open the door! 'Dsheartlikins that mad fellow will be as good as his word.

Belw. Boy, bring something to force the door.

Blunt. So, now must I speak in my own defence, I'll try what rhetorick will do——hold——hold, what do you mean, gentlemen, what do you mean?

Belw. Oh rogue, art alive? prithee open the door, and convince us.

Blunt. Yes, I am alive, gentlemen——but at present a little busy about private concerns.

Belw. How! Blunt grown a man of business! come, come, open, and let's see this miracle. [within.

Blunt. No, no, no, no, gentlemen, 'tis no great business——but——I am——at——my devotion,——'dsheartlikins, will you not allow a man time to pray?

Belw. Turn'd religious! A greater wonder than the first, therefore open quickly, or we shall unhinge, we shall. [Within.

Blunt. This wo'nt do——Why, hark ye, Colonel; to tell you the plain truth, I am about a necessary affair of life——I have a wench with me——you apprehend me, the devil's in't if they can be so uncivil as to disturb me now.

Wil. How, a wench! nay, then we must enter and partake; no resistance,——unless it be your lady of quality, and then we'll keep our distance.

Blunt. So, the business is out,

Wil.

Wil. Come, come, lend more hands to the door,——now heave altogether——so, well done, my boys—— [break open the door.

Enter Belvile, Willmore, Fred. and Pedro: Blunt looks simply, they all laugh at him, he lays his hand on his sword, and comes up to Willmore.

Blunt. Hark ye, Sir, laugh out your laugh quickly, d'ye hear, and be gone, I shall spoil your sport else; 'dheartlikins, Sir, I shall——the jest has been carried on too long,—a plague upon my taylor—— [Aside.

Wil. 'Sdeath, how the whore has dress'd him! faith, Sir, I'm sorry.

Blunt. Are you so, Sir? Keep't to your self then, Sir, I advise you, d'ye hear? for I can as little endure your pity as his mirth.

Belv. Indeed Willmore, thou wert a little too rough with Ned Blunt's mistress; call a person of quality whore, and one so young, so handsome, and so eloquent!—Ha, ha ha.

Blunt. Hark ye, Sir, you know me, and know I can be angry; have a care——for 'dheartlikins I can fight too——I can Sir,——do you mark me——no more I entreat you.

Belv. Why so peevish, good Ned? Some disappointments, I'll warrant——What! did the jealous Count her husband return just in the nick?

Blunt. Or the devil, Sir,——d'ye laugh? [They laugh.
Look ye, settle me a good sober countenance, and that quickly too, or you shall know Ned Blunt is not.

Belv. Not a Solomon, we know that.

Blunt. Not an ass, to be laugh'd at, Sir.

Wil. Unconscionable sinner, to bring a lover so near his happiness, a vigorous passionate lover, and then not only cheat him of his moveables, but his desires too.

Belv. Ah, Sir, a mistress is a trifle with Blunt, he'll have a dozen the next time he looks abroad, his eyes have charms not to be resisted: there needs no more than to expose that taking person to the view of the fair, and he leads 'em all in triumph.

Ped. Sir, tho' I'm a stranger to you, I'm ashamed at the rudeness of my nation; and could you learn who did it, would assist you to make an example of 'em.

Blunt. Why, ay, there's one speaks sense now, and handsomly; and let me tell you, gentlemen, I should not have shew'd my self a jack-pudding, thus to have made you mirth, but that I have revenge within my power; for know, I have got into my possession a female, who had better have fallen under my curse, than the ruin I design her: 'dheartlikins, she assaulted me here in my own lodgings, and had doubtless committed a rape upon me, had not this sword defended me.

Fred. I knew not that, but o' my conscience thou hadst ravish'd her, had she not redeem'd her self with a ring——let's see't Blunt.

Belv. Hah!——the ring I gave Florinda when we exchange'd our vows!——hark ye Blunt—— [Goes to whisper to him.

Wil.

Wil. No whispering, good colonel, there's a woman in the case, no whispering.

Belv. Hark ye, fool be advis'd, and conceal both the ring and the story, for your reputation's sake; don't let people know what despis'd cullies we English are: to be cheated and abus'd by one whore, and another rather bribe thee than be kind to thee, is an infamy to our nation.

Wil. Come, come, where's the wench? we'll see her, let her be what she will, we'll see her.

Ped. Ay, ay, let us see her, I can soon discover whether she be of quality, or for your diversion.

Blunt. She's in Fred's custody.

Wil. Come, come, the key.

Belv. Death! what shall I do?—Stay, gentlemen,—yet if I hinder 'em, I shall discover all—hold, let's go one at once—give me the key.

Wil. Nay, hold there, Colonel, I'll go first.

Fred. Nay, no dispute, Ned and I have the property of her.

Wil. Damn property—then we'll draw cuts.

[Belv. goes to whisper Will.

Nay no corruption, good Colonel; come, the longest sword carries her.—

Blunt. I yield up my interest to you, gentlemen, and that will be re-venge sufficient.

Wil. The wench is yours—(To Ped.) Pox of his Toledo, I had forgot that.

Fred. Come, Sir, I'll conduct you to the lady. [Ex. Fred. and Ped.

Belv. To hinder him will certainly discover— [Aside.
Dost know, dull beast, what mischief thou hast done?

Wil. Ay, ay, to trust our fortune to lots, a devil on't, 'twas madness, that's the truth on't.

Belv. Oh intolerable Sot!

Enter Florinda, running masqu'd, Pedro after her, Will gazing round her.

Flor. Good heaven, defend me from discovery. [Aside.

Pedro. 'Tis but in vain to fly me, you are fallen to my lot.

Belv. Sure she is undiscover'd yet, but now I fear there is no way to bring her off.

Wil. Why, what a pox is not this my woman, the same I follow'd but now. [Ped. talking to Florinda, who walks up and down.

Ped. As if I did not know ye, and your business here.

Flor. Good heaven! I fear he does indeed— [Aside.

Ped. Come, pray be kind, I know you meant to be so when you enter'd here, for these are proper gentlemen.

Wil. But, Sir—perhaps the lady will not be impos'd upon, she'll choose her man.

Fred. I am better bred, than not to leave her choice free.

Enter

Enter Valeria, and is surpriz'd at the Sight of Don Pedro.

Val. Don Pedro here! There's no avoiding him. [Aside.

Flor. Valeria! Then I'm undone—— [Aside.

Val. Oh! have I found you, Sir—— [To Pedro, running to him.

——The strangest accident——if I had breath——to tell it.

Ped. Speak——is Florinda safe? Hellena well?

Val. Ay, ay, Sir——Florinda——is safe——from any fears of you.

Ped. Why, where's Florinda?——speak.

Val. Ay, where indeed, Sir? I wish I could inform you.

——But to hold you no longer in doubt——

Flor. Oh, what will she say? [Aside

Val. She's fled away in the habit of one of her pages, Sir——but

Callis thinks you may retrieve her yet, if you make haste away; she'll tell you, Sir, the rest——if you can find her out. [Aside.

Ped. Dishonourable girl, she has undone my aim——Sir you see my necessity of leaving you, and I hope you'll pardon it: My sister, I know, will make her flight to you; and if she do, I shall expect she should be render'db ack.

Belv. I shall consult my love and honour, Sir. [Ex. Ped.

Flor. My dear preserver, let me embrace thee. [To Val.

Wil. What the devil's all this?

Blunt. Mysterý by this light.

Val. Come, come, make haste and get yourselves married quickly, for your brother will return again.

Belv. I am so surpriz'd with fears and joys, so amaz'd to find you here in safety, I can scarce persuade my heart into a faith of what I see——

Wil. Harkye, colonel, is this that mistress who has cost you so many figs, and me so many quarrels with you?

Belv. It is——Pray give him the honour of your hand. [To Flor.

Wil. Thus it must be receiv'd then. [Kneels and kisses her hand.

And with it give your pardon too.

Flor. The friend to Belville may command me any thing.

Wil. Death, I wish I might, 'tis a surprizing Beauty. [Aside.

Belv. Boy, run and fetch a father instantly. [Ex. Boy.

Fred. So, now do I stand like a dog, and have not a syllable to plead my own cause with, by this hand, Madam, I was never thorowly confounded before, nor shall I ever more dare look up with confidence, till you are pleas'd to pardon me.

Flor. Sir, I'll be reconcil'd to you on one condition, that you'll follow the example of my friend, in marrying a maid that does not hate you, and whose fortune (I believe) will not be unwelcome to you.

Fred. Madam, had I no inclinations that way, I shou'd obey your kind commands.

Belv. Who, Fred. marry? He has so few inclinations for woman-kind, that had he been possess'd of Paradise, he might have continu'd there to this day, if no crime but love cou'd have disinherited him.

Fred. Oh, I do not use to boast of my intrigues.

Belv. Boast! Why thou do'st nothing but boast; and I dare swear, wer't thou as innocent from the sin of the grape, as thou art from the apple, thou might'st yet claim that right in Eden which our first parents lost by too much loving.

Fred.

Fred. I wish this lady would think me so modest a man.

Val. She shou'd be sorry then, and not like you half so well, and I shou'd be loth to break my word with you; which was, that if your friend and mine are agreed, it should be a match between you and I.

Fred. Bear witness, colonel, 'tis a bargain. [Kisses her hand.

Blunt. I have a pardon to beg too; but adfheartlikins I am so out of countenance, that I am a dog if I can say any thing to the purpose.

Flor. Sir, I heartily forgive you all.

Blunt. That's nobly said, sweet lady———Belwile, prithee present her her ring again, for I find I have not courage to approach her myself. [Gives him the ring, he gives it to Florinda.

Enter Boy.

Boy. Sir, I have brought the father that you sent for.

Belw. 'Tis well, and now my dear Florinda, let's fly to compleat that mighty joy we have so long wish'd and sigh'd for.———Come, Fred. you'll follow.

Fred. Your example, Sir, 'twas ever my ambition in war, and must be so in love.

Wil. And must not I see this juggling knot ty'd?

Belw. No, thou shalt do us better service, and be our guard, lest Don Pedro's sudden return interrupt the ceremony.

Wil. Content; I'll secure this pass. [Ex. Bel. Flor. Fred. and Val.

Enter Boy.

Boy. Sir, there's a lady without wou'd speak with you. [To Wil.

Wil. Conduct her in, I dare not quit my post.

Boy. And, Sir, your taylor waits you in your chamber.

Blunt. Some comfort yet, I shall not dance naked at the wedding.

Enter again the Boy, conducting in Angelica in a masquing habit and a Vizard. Will. runs to her.

Wil. This can be none but my pretty gipsy———Oh, I see you can follow as well as fly———Come, confess thyself the most malicious devil in nature, you think you have done my bus'ness with Angelica———

Ang. Stand off, base villain— [She draws a pistol and holds to his breast.

Wil. Hah, 'tis not she: Who art thou? And what's thy business?

Ang. One thou hast injur'd, and who comes to kill thee for't.

Wil. What the devil canst thou mean?

Ang. By all my hopes to kill thee———

Wil. Prithee on what acquaintance? For I know thee not.

Ang. Behold this face!—so lost to thy remembrance!

And then call all thy sins about thy soul, [Pulls off her vizard.

And let them die with thee.

Wil. Angelica!

Ang. Yes, traitor.

Does not thy guilty blood run shivering thro' thy veins?

Hast thou no horror at this sight, that tells thee,

Thou hast not long to boast thy shameful conquest?

Wil.

Wil. Faith, no child, my blood keeps its old ebbs and flows still, an that usual heat too, that cou'd oblige thee with a kindness, had I but opportunity.

Ang. Devil! dost wanton with my pain——have at thy heart then.

Wil. Hold, dear virago! hold thy hand a little,

I am not now at leisure to be kill'd—hold and hear me—

Death, I think she's in earnest.

Ang. Oh if I take not heed,

My coward heart will leave me to his mercy. [Aside, turning from him.

——What have you, Sir, to say?—But should I hear thee,

Thou'dst talk away all that is brave about me :

And I have vow'd thy death, by all that's sacred.

Ang. Yet——I wou'd give thee ——time for penitence. [Pausingly.

Wil. Faith, child, I have ever took care to lead a good, sober, hopeful life, and am of a religion that teaches me to believe, I shall depart in peace.

Ang. So will the devil: Tell me

How many poor believing fools thou hast undone ;

How many hearts thou hast betray'd to ruin!

——Yet these are little mischiefs to the ills

Thou'st taught mine to commit: Thou'st taught it love.

Wil. Egad 'twas shrewdly hurt the while.

Ang. ——Love, that has robb'd it of its unconcern,

Of all that pride that taught me how to value it,

And in its room a mean submissive passion was convey'd,

That made me humbly bow, which I ne'er did

To any thing but heaven.

——Thou, purjur'd man, didst this, and with thy oaths,

Which on thy knees thou didst devoutly make,

Softend'd my yielding heart—and then, I was a slave——

Yet still had been content to've worn my chains,

Worn 'em with vanity and joy for ever,

Hadst thou not broke those vows that put them on.

——'Twas then I was undone.

Wil. Broke my vows! Why, where hast thou lived?

Amongst the Gods! For I never heard of mortal man,

That has not broke a thousand vows.

Ang. Oh, impudence!

Wil. Angelica! That beauty has been too long tempting,

Not to have made a thousand lovers languish,

Who in the amorous favour, no doubt have sworn

Like me; did they all die in faith? Still adoring?

I do not think they did.

Ang. No, faithless man: had I repaid their vows, as I did thine, I wou'd have kill'd the ungrateful that had abandon'd me.

Wil. This old general has quite spoil'd thee, nothing makes a woman so vain, as being flatter'd; your old lover ever supplies the defects of age, with intolerable dotage, vast charge, and that which you call constancy; and attributing all this to your own merits, you domineer, and throw your favour's in's teeth, upbraiding him still with the defects of age, and cuckold him as often as he deceives your expectations. But the gay, young, brisk lover, that brings his equal fires, and can give you dart for dart, he'll be as nice as you sometimes.

Ang. All this thou'st made me know, for which I hate thee.

Had I remain'd in innocent security

I shou'd have thought all men were born my slaves;

And worn my pow'r like lightning in my eyes,
To have destroy'd at pleasure when offended.

—But when love held the mirror, the undeceiving glass
Reflected all the weakness of my soul, and made me know,
My richest treasure being lost, my honour,
All the remaining spoil cou'd not be worth
The conqueror's care or value.

—Oh how I fell like a long worship'd Idol,
Discovering all the cheat!

Wou'd not the incense and rich sacrifice,
Which blind devotion offer'd at my altars,
Have fall'n to thee?

Why wou'd'st thou then destroy my fanfy'd power?

Wil. By heaven thou art brave, and I admire thee strangely.

I wish I were that dull, that constant thing,
Which thou wou'd'st have, and nature never meant me:
I must, like chearful birds, sing in all groves,
And perch on every bough,
Billing the next kind she that flies to meet me;
Yet after all cou'd build my nest with thee,
Thither repairing when I'd lov'd my round,
And still reserve a tributary flame.

—To gain your credit, I'll pay you back your charity,
And be oblig'd for nothing but for love. [Offers her a Purse of Gold.]

Ang. Oh that thou wert in earnest!

So mean a thought of me,
Wou'd turn my rage to scorn, and I shou'd pity thee,
And give thee leave to live;
Which for the publick safety of our sex,
And my own private injuries, I dare not do.
Prepare—

[Follows still, as before.]

—I will no more be tempted with replies.

Wil. Sure—

Ang. Another word will damn thee! I've heard thee talk too long.

[She follows him with a Pistol ready to shoot: He retires still amaz'd

Enter Don Antonio, his arm in a scarf, and lays hold on the Pistol.

Ant. Ha! Angelica!

Ang. Antonio! What the devil brought thee hither?

Ant. Love and curiosity, seeing your coach at door. Let me disarm you of this unbecoming instrument of death.— [Takes away the Pistol.]
Amongst the number of your slaves, were there not one worthy the honour to have fought your quarrel?

—Who are you Sir, that are so very wretched
To merit death from her?

Wil. One, Sir, that cou'd have made a much better end of an amorous quarrel without you, than with you.

Ant. Sure 'tis some rival—hah—the very man that took down her picture yesterday—the very same that set on me last night—blest opportunity— [Offers to shoot him.]

Ang. Hold, you're mistaken, Sir.

Ant. By heaven the very same!

—Sir, what pretensions have you to this lady?

Wil. Sir, I don't ute to be examin'd, and am ill at all disputes but this—[Draws, Anton. offers to shoot.]

Ang. Oh, hold! You see he's arm'd with certain death: [To Will.]

—And you, Antonio, I command you hold,
By all the passion you've so lately vow'd me.

Enter Don Pedro, sees Antonio, and stays.

Ped. Hah, Antonio! and Angelica!

[Aside.

Ant. When I refuse obedience to your will,
May you destroy me with your mortal hate.
By all that's holy I adore you so,
That even my rival, who has charms enough
To make him fall a victim to my jealousy,
Shall live, nay, and have leave to love on still.

Ped. What's this I hear?

[Aside

Ang. Ah thus, 'twas thus he talk'd, and I believ'd. [Pointing to Will

Antonio, yesterday

I'd not have sold my interest in his heart,
For all the sword has won and lost in battle.

But now to show my utmost of contempt,
I give thee life—which if thou would'st preserve,
Live where my eyes may never see thee more,
Live to undo some one, whose soul may prove
So bravely constant to revenge my Love.

Ped. Antonio—stay.

Ant. Don Pedro—

Ped. What coward fear was that prevented thee
From meeting me this morning on the Molo?

Ant. Meet thee?

Ped. Yes me; I was the man that dar'd thee to't.

Ant. Hast thou so often seen me fight in war,
To find no better cause to excuse my absence?

I sent my sword and one to do thee right,
Finding my self incapable to use a sword.

Ped. But 'twas Florinda's quarrel that we fought,
And you to shew how little you esteem'd her,
Sent me your rival, giving him your interest.

But I have found the cause of this affront,
And when I meet you fit for the dispute,

I'll tell you my resentment.

Ant. I shall be ready, Sir, ere long to do you satisfaction. [Ex. Anto.

Ped. If I cou'd find Florinda, now whilst my anger's high, I think I shou'd be kind, and give her to Belvile in revenge.

Wil. Faith, Sir, I know not what you wou'd do, but I believe the Priest within has been so kind.

Ped. How! my Sister married?

Wil. I hope by this time she is, and bedded too, or Belvile has not my longings about him.

Ped. Dares he do thus? Does he not fear my pow'r?

Wil. Faith not at all. If you will go in, and thank him for the favour he has done your sister, do; if not, Sir, my power's greater in this house than yours; I have a damn'd surly crew here, that will keep you till the next tide, and then clap you on board my prize; my ship lies but a league off the Molo, and we shall show your Donship a damn'd Tramontana rover's trick.

Enter Belvile.

Belv. This rogue's in some new mitchief—hah, Pedro return'd!

Ped. Colonel Belvile, I hear you have married my sister.

Belv. You have heard truth then, Sir.

Ped. Have I so? then, Sir, I wish you joy.

Belv. How!

Ped. By this embrace I do, and I am glad on't.

Belv. Are you in earnest?

Ped. By our long friendship and my obligations to thee, I am. The sudden change I'll give your reasons for anon. Come lead me to my sister, that she may know I now approve her choice.

[Exit Belv. with Ped. Will. goes to follow him.

Enter Hellena as before in boy's clothes, and pulls him back.

Wil. Ha! my gipsy——Now a thousand blessings on thee for this kindness. Egad, child, I was e'en in despair of ever seeing thee again; my friends are all provided for within, each man his kind woman.

Hel. Hah! I thought they had serv'd me some such trick.

Wil. And I was e'en resolv'd to go abroad, condemn my self to lone cabin, and the thoughts of thee.

Hel. And cou'd you have left me behind? wou'd you have been so ill-natur'd?

Wil. Why, 'twould have broke my heart, child——but since we are met again I would defy foul weather to part us.

Hel. And wou'd you be a faithful friend now, if a maid shou'd trust you.

Wil. For a friend I cannot promise, thou art of a form so excellent, a face and humour too good for cold dull friendship; I am parlowly afraid of being in love, child, and you have not forgot how severely you have us'd me.

Hel. That's all one, such usage you must still look for, to find out all your haunts, to rail at you to all that love you, till I have made you love only me in your own defence, because no body else will love.

Wil. But hast thou no better quality to recommend thy self by?

Hel. Faith none, Captain——Why, 'twill be the greater charity to take me for thy mistress, I am a lone child, a kind of Orphan lover; and why I shou'd die a maid, and in a Captain's hands too, I do not understand.

Wil. Egad, I was never claw'd away with broad sides from any female before, thou hast one virtue I adore, good-nature; I hate a coy demure mistress, she's as troublesome as a colt, I'll break none; no, give me a mad mistress when mew'd, and in flying on I dare trust upon the wing, that whilst she's kind will come to the lure.

Hel. Nay as kind as you will, good Captain, whilst it lasts, but let's lose no time.

Wil. My time's as precious to me, as thine can be; therefore dear creature, since we are so well agreed, let's retire to my chamber, and if ever thou wert treated with such savory love——Come, my bed's prepar'd for such a guest, all clean and sweet as thy fair self; I love to steal a dish and a bottle with a friend, and hate long graces——Come let's retire and fall too.

Hel. 'Tis but getting my consent, and the business is soon done; let but old Gaffer Hymen and his Priest say Amen to't, and I dare lay my mother's daughter by as proper a fellow as your father's son, without fear or blushing.

Wil. Hold, hold, no bugg words, child; priest and Hymen! prithee add hangman to 'em to make up the consort—No, no, we'll have no vows but love, child, no witnesses but the lover; the kind deity enjoins naught but love and enjoy. Hymen and priest waited still upon the portion, and jointure; love and beauty have their own ceremonies. Marriage is as certain a bane to love, as lending money is to friendship: I'll neither ask nor give a vow, tho' I could be content to turn gipsy, and become a left-hand bridegroom, to have the pleasure of working that great miracle of making a maid a mother if you durst venture; 'tis upsy gipsy that, and if I miss, I'll lose my labour.

Hel. And if you do not lose, what shall I get? A cradle full of noise and mischief, with a pack of repentance at my back? Can you teach me to weave inkle to pass my time with? 'Tis upse gipsy that too.

Wil. I can teach thee to weave a true lover's knot better.

Hel. So can my dog.

Wil. Well, I see we are both upon our guard, and I see there's no way to conquer good nature, but by yielding—here—give me thy hand—one kiss and I am thine—

Hel. One kiss! how like my page he speaks; I am resolved you shall have none, for asking such a sneaking sum—He that will be satisfied with one kiss, will never die of that longing; good friend single kiss, is all your talking come to this?—A kiss, a caudle! farewell captain single-kiss.

[Going out he stays her.]

Wil. Nay if we part so, let me die like a bird upon a bough, at the sheriffs charge. By heaven, both the Indies shall not buy thee from me. I adore thy humour and will marry thee, and we are so of one humour, it must be a bargain—give me thy hand—

[Kisses her hand.]

And now let the blind ones (love and fortune) do their worst.

Hel. Why, god-a-mercy, captain!

Wil. But harkye—the bargain is now made; but is it not fit we shou'd know each other's names? That when we have reason to curse one another hereafter, and people ask me who 'tis I give to the devil, I may at least be able to tell what family you came of.

Hel. Good reason, captain; and where I have a cause, (as I doubt not but I shall have plentiful) that I may know at whom to throw my—blessings—I beseech ye your name.

Wil. I am called Robert the Constant.

Hel. A very fine name! pray was it your faulkner or butler that christen'd you? Do they not use to whistle when they call you?

Wil. I hope you have a better, that a man may name without crossing himself, you are so merry with mine.

Hel. I am call'd Hellena the inconstant.

Enter Pedro, Belvile, Florinda, Fred. Valeria.

Ped. Hah! Hellena!

Flor. Hellena!

Hel. The very same—hath my brother! now captain shew your love and courage; stand to your arms, and defend me bravely, or I am lost for ever.

Ped. What's this hear? false girl, how came you hither, and what's your business? Speak.

[Goes roughly to her.]

Wil. Hold off, Sir, you have leave to parly only.

[Puts himself between.]

Hel. I had e'en as good tell it, as you guess it. Faith brother, my business is to love, and be loved, and here's the man.

Ped. Fidious maid, hast thou deceiv'd me too, deceived thyself and heaven?

Hel. 'Tis time enough to make my peace with that: Be you but kind, let me alone with heaven.

Ped. Belvile, I did not expect this false play from you was't not enough you'd gain Florinda (which I pardon'd) but your leud friends too must be enrich'd with the spoils of a noble family,

Belv. Faith Sir, I am as much surpriz'd at this as you can be: yet, Sir, my friends are gentlemen, and ought to be esteem'd for their misfortunes, since they have the glory to suffer with the best of men and kings; 'tis true, he's a rover of fortune, yet a prince aboard his little wooden world.

Ped. What's this to the maintenance of a woman of her birth and quality.

Wil. Faith, Sir, I can boast of nothing but a sword which does me right wherever I come, and has defended a worse cause than a woman's, and since I lov'd her before I either knew her birth or name, I must pursue my resolution, and marry her.

Ped. And is all your holy intent of becoming a nun debauch'd into a desire of man?

Hel. Why—I have consider'd the matter, brother, and find the three hundred thousand crowns my uncle left me (and you cannot keep from me) will be better laid out in love than in religion, and turn to as good an account—let most voices carry it, for heaven or the captain?

All cry. A captain, a captain.

Hel. Look ye, Sir, 'tis a clear case.

Ped. Oh I am mad—if I refuse, my life's in danger.—[Aside.—Come—There's one motive induces me—take her—I shall now be free from the fear of her honour; guard it you now, if you can, I have been a slave to't long enough.] [Gives her to him.]

Wil. Faith, Sir, I am of a nation, that are of opinion a woman's honour is not worth guarding when she has a mind to part with it.

Hel. Well said, captain.

Ped. This was your plot, mistress, but I hope you have married one that will revenge my quarrel to you—[To Valeria.]

Val. There's no altering destiny, Sir.

Ped. Sooner than a woman's will, therefore I forgive you all—and wish you may get my father's pardon as easily; which I fear.

Enter Blunt dress'd in a Spanish habit, looking very ridiculously; his man adjusting his band.

Man. 'Tis very well, Sir.

Blunt. Well, Sir, 'dsheartlikins I tell you 'tis dampable ill, Sir—a Spanish habit, good Lord? Cou'd the Devil and my taylor devise no other punishment for me, but the mode of a nation I abominate?

Belv. What's the matter Ned?

Blunt. Pray view me round, and judge—[Turns round.]

Belv. I must confess thou art a kind of an odd figure.

Blunt. In a Spanish habit with a vengeance! I had rather be in the inquisition for Judaism, than in this doublet and breeches; a pillory were an easy collar to this, three handfuls high; and these shoes too are worse than the rocks, with the sole an inch shorter than my foot: in fine, gentlemen, methinks I look altogether like a bag of bays stuff'd full of fools flesh.

Belv. Methinks 'tis well, and makes thee look en Cavalier:

Come, Sir, settle your face, and salute our friends, Lady—

Blunt. Hah! Say'st thou so, my little rover? [To Hellena.] Lady—(if you be one) give me leave to kiss your hand, and tell you, ad'sheartlikins, for all I look so, I am your humble servant—A pox of my Spanish habit.

Will. Hark—what's this? [Musick is heard to play.]

Enter Boy.

Boy. Sir, as the custom is, the gay people in masquerade, who make every man's house their own, are coming up.

Enter several men and women in masquing habits, with musick, they put themselves in order and dance.

Blunt. Ad'sheartlikins, wou'd 'twere lawful to pull off their false faces that I may see if my doxy were not amongst 'em.

Belv. Ladies and gentlemen, since you are come so a propos, you must take a small collation with us. [To the masquers.]

Wil. Whilst we'll go to the good man within, who stays to give us a call of his office [To Hell.]

—Have you no trembling at the near approach?

Hel. No more than a brave man has in an engagement or tempest.

Wil. Egad thou'rt a brave girl, and I admire thy love and courage.

Lead on; no other dangers they can dread,

Who ventures a defenceless maidenhead,

Amidst the raging storms o'th' marriage bed.

[Exeunt.]
